NGLTF DENOUNCES SPORTSCASTER'S COMMENTS

WASHINGTON, D.C. — CBS sportscaster Ben Wright, who is covering the McDonald's Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) Championship in Delaware told a local newspaper that "lesbians in the sport hurt women's golf." Wright added in his interview with the Wilmington News-Journal, "When it gets to the corporate level, that's not going to fly. They're going to a butch game and that furthers the bad image of the game." He then went on to say that "women are handicapped by having boobs...it's not easy for them to keep their left arm straight, and that's one of the tenets of the game. Their boobs get in the way." Wright denies making any of the comments attributed to him and Valerie Helmbreck of the Wilmington News-Journal stands by her story.

"Lesbians don't hurt women's golf — Ben Wright hurts women's golf, and his own profession as well," said Robin Kane, spokesperson for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force (NGLTF). "Such outrageous and demeaning comments certainly raise questions about Wright's ability to cover women's sports fairly."

"This is just one more example of how homophobia in sports hurts all women athletes, whether lesbian or heterosexual," said Dr. Dee Mosbacher, NGLTF board member and producer of the documentary film "Out For A Change: Addressing Homophobia in Women's Sports." "Wright's comments clearly identify the connection between homophobia and sexism that women athletes face."

"The professional sports world is perhaps the most anti-gay workplace in America," Kane added. "We've seen fewer gay and lesbian people come out in professional sports than in the military, where there is an explicit anti-gay policy. That indicates the level of homophobia, fear and bigotry that pervades the profession. Wright's comments only add to that atmosphere."

LPGA officials denied seeing any "evidence of lesbian activity," and one official also wondered why Wright hadn't mentioned "Male players who fool around on their wives," implying that lesbianism and infidelity were equatable "wrongs."

The NGLTF Activist Alert says that "The LPGA missed an opportunity to publicly support women golfers and female athletes everywhere against lesbian-baiting and sexism that pervades women's sports. Instead, the LPGA validated homophobia and sexism, further alienating women athletes and fans of all sexual orientations."

DALLAS GAY ALLIANCE PRODUCES VIDEO

DALLAS — The Dallas Lesbian and Gay Alliance (DGLA), in a direct challenge to the rhetoric of "The Gay Agenda" and "Gay Rights/Special Rights," has produced a video entitled "In Our Own Words: Dispelling the Stereotypes." Featuring more than two dozen gay and lesbian individuals, this video refutes the stereotypes being promoted by the far right. It provides an accurate, positive, and hopeful message of better understanding.

John E. Wimberly, Chair of DGLA's Police Project and a member of its Board of Directors, organized the production of this video after recognizing the need for a training video for the Dallas Police Department. After much effort by Wimberly and Susan Gore, a diversity training specialist, the department agreed to include it in their training programs for all current personnel and new recruits.

"While the catalyst to produce this video was the need at the Dallas Police Department, the video was made with a broader audience in mind," said Wimberly. "It can be very useful in any sensitivity or diversity training program, because it presents a far more accurate image of who we really are, in all our diversity, rather than the negative stereotypes that the far right continues to promote."

DGLA is marketing this video to corporations, human resources personnel, government agencies, churches and all other groups interested in promoting better understanding by providing truthful information about gay and lesbian people."

The eight minute video features 28 different gay and lesbian individuals, ranging in age from their teens to their seventies, who represent a broad spectrum of races, religions and ethnic groups. Also included are a deaf woman speaking in sign, a gay man in a wheelchair, and a lesbian mother with her daughter. They address a number of issues, including teen suicide, hate crimes, family values, and AIDS.

"In Our Own Words: Dispelling the Stereotypes" is available by sending $13.00 per video (including shipping and handling) to: Dallas Gay and Lesbian Alliance, P.O. Box 190712, Dallas, TX 75219, or by contacting DGLA at (214) 528-4233 or at e-mail address dgla@aol.com.

DEAR AGNES

ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT LOVE, RELATIONSHIPS & PERSONAL PROBLEMS

Dear Agnes,

I need help! Three years ago I had an affair with a woman I'll call Jane who worked in my office. It lasted about three months and then we went our separate ways. I haven't cheated on my lover before or since (we've been together almost seven years).

The problem is that Jane recently went to work for the same company my lover works for and the two of them have become friends. I am quite sure that Jane doesn't realize that this woman is my lover since they never met when Jane and I were seeing each other.

Now, my lover has been talking about inviting Jane and her new lover over for dinner and I don't know what to do. I think I should warn Jane before she just shows up on our doorstep and discovers me there, but I don't know how to go about it. I've managed to postpone this dinner for awhile, but I think it is inevitable at this point.

What should I do? Jane has an unlisted home phone number (I know because I've already tried calling information) and I'm afraid to call her at work since the receptionist in my lover's office knows my voice.

Do you have any suggestions about how to handle this? I'm at a complete loss.

FEELING TRAPPED FT. WORTH, TX

Dear Trapped,

Although I usually don't advocate lying,

I believe in the old saying that "What you don't know won't hurt you." If you are telling the truth about this being the only affair and it having ended three years ago, I see no reason why you should hurt your lover by telling her now.

Your only options are to have a friend you trust (or your secretary if you have one) call your lover's office and ask for Jane and then transfer the call to you—or look in your lover's address book and see if she has Jane's home phone number. Otherwise, you'll just have to take your chances.

There is one other possibility to consider—that your lover has already mentioned your name to Jane and she is just as concerned about this dinner as you are. She may think you don't know which "Jane" she is and may be as afraid to show up on your doorstep as you are to have her there.

Dear Agnes,

I have a big question that I don't know how to handle. I just came out to myself about a year ago. I was married for twelve years and have custody of our three children (ages 6, 8 & 11). Although my ex-husband is being very understanding about the reasons for our divorce, I haven't told my children the real reason behind it all.

I am not now and have never been in a relationship with a woman. I did have a brief affair with a friend/neighbor in the year before my divorce, but my children never knew about it.

So here's my question — should I tell my children I'm a lesbian? I'm not sure at what age they will be able to handle this information. Should I wait until I have a lover or will that only make it more traumatic? Please help. I don't want to harm my kids by not telling them, but I'm just not sure how or when to go about it.

NEWLY GAY DALLAS, TX

Dear Gay,

There is no one answer to your questions. There are many things to take into consideration, including their ages and temperaments, your personal situation with your parents, friends, etc., and societies prejudices. You must weigh all this against your need to be honest and the fact that your children may be blaming themselves for your divorce. Take into consideration that your kids may already suspect and be relieved when it is finally out in the open.

You didn't indicate the sexes of your children, but it is important to remember that if you have boys, they may feel that you are rejecting them too. In other words, they may think that since you are a lesbian, you don't want any males around — including them. Be very firm about the fact that just because you are gay doesn't mean you don't love them and want them around.

Support from a lesbian mother's group or an open-minded therapist could be beneficial for both you and the kids during this difficult period.

WHAT IS IT?
WHERE IS IT?
& WHY AM I DOING IT?

By Dona.Juan8

I consider myself to be an average All American lesbian. I guess if there is such a thing, I'm it. I have my lover of 15 years, home, dogs, job and the other usual activities going on, work, TV, O.J. trial and bed. No visits to the bars every night, or in the past year for that fact. Happy, contented home life. Nothing overly exciting.

I believed I should buy a computer to become more literate and well-rounded in my job. Bought top of the line hardware with the pre-loaded software for every conceivable connection to On-Line Services. Have it all. America On Line, Prodigy, CompuServe with direct access to the Internet.

So, here I go — onto America On Line — finding that there are tons of chat rooms you can enter and talk with people on an on-going basis. They type and you see it, you answer them back and it all scrolls on the screen in front of you. Amazing, instant communication at your finger tips. A phone call with the world. Instead of 3-way calling, we now have billion-way calling. As I browse the room names, I also see there are an endless number of chat room for Gays & Lesbians ... intriguing. OK, I figure this would be a good place to find new friends & see what is happening in the American Gay Community.

As I announce my arrival with the usual salutation of "Hello," I see that people send me instant messages (IM's) which flash on my screen and I can answer them back without the people in the "room" seeing it. Great. Private lines. Then soon, I get IM's from User's with such names as Hardlover, Eatup. The messages are gross, explicit and can only be compared to an obscene phone call. Most I ignore by clicking cancel. Then I think, let's have some fun and begin to answer back with witty comments. Now I am rolling. This is fun. I can say all the things I ever wanted to say and have the barrier and cloak of anonymity. No one will ever know who I am. Wonderful.

As I watch the exchanges in the public rooms, I see that anyone can enter seeking their personal desires or expressing their hatred, fears and loves. A virtual coming-together of all types in one small 14" wide screen sitting on my desk. I gallantly take up the sword and begin to fend off the Gay Bashers, saving everyone in the room from cuts and bruises. I find I have comrades in arms standing beside me and that we have become an army of defenders. We are fighting the world every day trying to save us from despair and restoring peace and love. Soon they leave. We have defeated the enemy and once again continue our journeys with swelled hearts. We are heroes.

As I read the chatter scrolling up the screen I instantly pick up on the banter of one particular user: Lar. This person is generally cutting up, bantering with others and making jokes. I like this person's wit, humor & satirical comments. I begin to talk to Lar and also see that she is trying to get women in a PRIVATE room. OK I think, this must be where the Cybersex takes place. I begin to try to talk to other women on the screen to get them to go with Lar and we eventually get a couple of users into a Private room. I wonder ... is this OK? I begin to think if I don't like what I read, I can escape with a quick click of the mouse. What could be harmful? Can they come through the screen and grab me around the neck? I don't think so. Only in my mind.

With Lar leading the way, I see that she is exploring and trying to find out about our "private room" visitors. I am struck still by her personality flowing up the screen. I begin to see as well that she is telling our ladies that she is touching them. Describing in detail how and where. I see this is soft and not vulgar in any way. Soon one of our visitors disappears from the screen. I assume she was not interested in our banter. I begin to think I will see what occurs. I sit back and watch to learn the ways of Cybersex. Even as she talk with the User, I can see and feel her coming out of my screen, becoming real to me instead of the anonymous name on the screen. I can also see that she is making every possible effort not to come across as vulgar or dirty. My heart pounds. I let my imagination run wild. She is becoming real. I can see that she is having fun as well. I join in and lighten the room up with my added comments. I begin to start setting the mood, lighting candles in the room, singing soft love songs, preparing the oils.

As I begin to type, my two new friends begin to respond by telling me what they are doing. Laughing, crying, joking, exploring and feeling lonely. I can feel the power of what I am saying to them by provoking images in their minds of things that are totally imagined. I am soaring and dancing on the phone line like a bird as free as the wind. I am giving them my thoughts, my dreams, my imagination. We begin to conclude our rendezvous and I feel the emptiness that will be left when they are blipped from my screen.

I begin to realize the power they have also exuded onto me. I am left wanting and wondering, as if I have fallen in love, as if a woman who has just breezed past me caught my eye and is gone in a flash, leaving me alone and sad because I will never see or know her again. I feel the emptiness and wonder if I overstepped the boundaries. I try to tell myself I am being foolish and stupid.

This was supposed to be fun and different. Instead, I was doubting myself and wondering how this was going to affect me. I now wanted to know the person on the screen. How was my Lover going to take this? I was not hiding because she was beside me all the while. I slept and dreamed of windows flashing before me, anonymous women waling around in my head. I awoke and realized that I needed to get a grip as soon as possible. Having the world at my fingertips was very powerful stuff. This was no ordinary phone call. I decided that I wanted to let this person into my life and to share with her. I signed on again the next night.

It was not long after wandering the rooms that she appeared again. Thank you goddess for delivering her to me. We went private again, this time only the two of us, but with my Lover beside me watching. I began to find out who she was, where she was & what was going on in her life. As we exchanged information, it became obvious that we were somehow connected. Our lives were very similar. We began to mirror each other, thinking the same thoughts and the conversation flew. My lover began to see as well that there was a special person on the other side of the monitor and that a relationship was forthcoming. We again signed off and the emptiness returned.

I began to wonder (again, if I had overstepped the bounds. It was too late. I now knew this person and she had become a part of my soul. The connection was definite, strong and powerful. I felt she was my soul mate. I was not willing to risk my relationship with my Lover, but I wanted to keep my computer relationships so I could awaken my sleeping brain. These weren't actually real were they? I didn't feel like I was compromising my Lover because she was there with me at all times. Lover and I discussed it and I believe she is seeing this how I see it. I immediately begin to things of what things I could do to spark our relationship and put more excitement into it.

My goodness, I even found Elle MacPherson on-line. I could see her words flying by and I wondered if she was the REAL Elle. It didn't matter. If I let myself believe it, it was real. Janis Ian was on my desk as well. An on-line program was held and we could ask Janis questions. Can you believe it? Janis Ian sitting on my desk. This is becoming more and more powerful each day.

I felt better. I began to become excited about each day. The trees were greener, the flowers more aromatic. I was actually going to bed later and sleeping later. I wanted to heal myself and others. My words were more important than ever before. I was becoming aware of how I could intensify my impressions on others by a choice of plain, everyday words. The AOL had become my therapist and Lar was making me more aware every day.

Lar and her lover are now regular visitors to my desk every day. We have called each other on the phone nearly every day. We are planning a rendezvous Labor Day in Florida. The possibilities are endless as we plan things we will do and imagine how it will be. There is fear that we can't relate to one another in person, but, if that happens I will go into the next room and pass her notes. And we will be soaring again.

Maybe it is sad that you can find such happiness one-line.

The possibilities are boundless. You can become whatever you want to be for the day. You can reach the stars and come back again. It is people. It is love.

WHAT A WORLD, WHAT A WORLD DEEP IN THE HEART OF TEXAS

BY NANCY FORD

This summer marks the 14th anniversary of my arrival in Texas. Fourteen years — isn't that the latex anniversary?

A refugee from the economic oppression of the Rust Belt. I joined the thousands and thousands of other hopeful Yankee emigres to the Lone Star State in the late 80's, seeking fame, fortune and good tan. Fourteen years of Houston sun later, I am considered somewhat infamous, appear much too well-fed to perpetuate the starving artist syndrome, and need to moisturize daily.

Texas is famous for a lot of things — big money, big sports teams, big hair: very appealing to one who had previously been known as a lowly Buckeye. What bright, pioneering Ohioan came up with that ego-smashing idea — that a small, hard, round, bitter, inedible nut was an image anyone would want to identify with? That's not a state symbol, that's my job description. Give me a symbol to latch onto that is self-esteem building, like a star, or the legend of Pecos Bill. Then watch me pack my U-Haul....

Fourteen years after my Northern Exodus, Texas has also become legendary as one of the nation's leading gay-bashing states. Hard to believe that our big, somewhat backward state still upholds its sodomy laws, and eight — count 'em, eight — men violently lost their lives here in 1994 specifically because they were gay. The Hate Crimes Bill, which would have increased penalties to perpetrators of crimes based on ethnicity, religion and sexual orientation, was recently defeated in the Texas Legislature. That same month our friends in Austin, under the direction of our new Governor George Bush Jr. (the Son that Won), passed a law making it okey-dokey to carry a concealed handgun. Somehow, in Texas, this evens things out.

Nonetheless, that doesn't mean I don't love living here, where the stars at night are big and bright. All I had to do was spend 36 hours in Indianapolis last month performing at a Gay Pride gig to be reminded that Texas is truly one of the most entertaining, diverse and breathtakingly beautiful places into the world — lots to see, lots to do.

As you plan your summertime travels, you may want to refer to the following list of recommendations to enhance your vacation expeditions. Clip and keep it in your wallet next to your Triple-A card.

TEXAS DO'S

— Sure, Six Flags Astroworld in Houston is no Disney World. But it is home to the Mayan Mindbender. Not a tequila-based cocktail, this Mayan Mindbender combines the romance of The Tunnel of Love with the thrills of a roller coaster — much like lesbian life itself. It's designed to look damned close to a ruin/pyramid I had climbed in the touristy undergrowth of Chichenitza a few years ago, sans benefit of cotton candy vendors.

Sight seeing in Austin? After you've checked out the imported aureola-pink tile of the Capitol Dome (the only one of it's kind), head slightly north to Hamilton Pool. Many, many years ago, before the Texas Hill Country became an epicenter for "natural girls" in hiking boots and slouch socks, a gigantic cave imploded upon itself, forming one of the most beautiful natural waterfalls in the state. This area has been preserved as a Wildlife Reserve, and is one of the most romantic sites in the Southwest. Pack a picnic and a poetry book.

—At the risk of morbidity, artsy camera-bug types on a budget should visit Glenwood Cemetery, located at 2525 Washington in Houston. Eccentric Texas billionaire Howard Hughes is buried there, and it's also home to some of the most impressive memorials and monuments in the country. Look for the "family" section, including unmarked memorial to "Two Women".

—Both Gallerias in Dallas and Houston and San Antonio's River Center over the River Walk are excellent meccas for shop-a-holics. Not only are these retail havens great places to queer-fashion watch, but they are also some of the safer public places in Texas where you can feel secure about holding your money in your hand as you sip an iced cappuccino.

TEXAS DON'TS —

— Don't visit Vidor or Tyler. These small towns are the queer-bashing capitols of Texas. Spend your hard-earned vacation money someplace where it will be appreciated.

— Don't ignore speed limits, especially as huge multi-lane interstates trickle down into two-way traffic. These little Bubba Burgs are long on barbecue and religious clogging organizations, but short on hospitality — especially to speed offenders with pink triangle or rainbow bumper stickers.

— Don't spit on the floor. I don't care what you've heard about Lone Star Lesbians — it's simply not done in polite company.

THE FEMME MYSTIQUE

edited by Lesléa Newman

A fascinating and insightful look at the world of femme identity within the lesbian community, written by femmes, former femmes, femme wanna-bes, femme admirers, and, of course, femmes fatales. Through poetry, essays, short fiction, and photography, The Femme Mystique explores what it means to be a femme and a lesbian in a society that often trivializes the feminine.

THE COFFEE CLUB

LESBIANS IN THE ARTS • BOOKS, MUSIC, MOVIES, ETC.

THIS MONTH, TASHA SUMNER INTRODUCES:

Greener Than Grass

by Jennifer Fulton

Someone to Watch

by Jaye Maiman

We'll start this month with Greener than Grass by Jennifer Fulton (author of Passion Bay, Saving Grace and (as Rose Beecham) the Amanda Valentine Mystery Series).

Documentary filmmaker Blair Carroll has come to Melbourne, Australia to work on a new project. She has just broken up with her lover of twenty years and thought a foreign project might be just the thing to help her get over it. She has borrowed a supposedly empty apartment from a friend for a month, but when she arrives she find a young woman asleep in her bed.

Cassie is the niece of the woman who owns the apartment and has come to Melbourne to find a job. Cassie needs to earn money to help her mother through the drought that is devastating their sheep ranch. She has found work booking reservations in the offices of an escort service (although she hasn't told anyone what her job really is).

Although there is a major difference in their ages and Blair comes from New York and Cassie from the Australian Outback, they get along remarkably well. Each is attracted to the other but both are sure that the other has no interest.

Greener Than Grass is one of the best lesbian romances I've read in quite some time. The ending left me grinning to myself for hours and wishing for an immediately available sequel. Jennifer Fulton is one of the best and most entertaining writers on the Naiad Press roster. Her books are always entertaining and often thought provoking. This one definitely deserves two thumbs up.

Next we'll look at Someone to Watch, the fourth in the Robin Miller Mystery Series by Jaye Maiman.

Robin Miller, a former romance writer turned private detective, is hot on the trail of a singer who has supposedly conned a New York bar owner. While she is trailing the con artist in Provincetown, she gets a frantic call from K.T., her lover. K.T. is asking her to help clear her best friend, Lurlene (who Robin can't stand) of suspicion in the murder of her photographer boyfriend.

Robin returns to New York and began an investigation into the murder when both K.T. and Lurlene disappear. As Robin looks for K.T., she also discovers some secrets about the murdered man and finds an interesting connection between him, an ultra-right-wing politician and a prominent gay activist. Someone to Watch follows in the footsteps of the previous Robin Miller Mysteries. In Robin, Jay Maiman has created a very human heroine. Robin is a headstrong woman with a roving eye and an entire list of human frailties. As for the other characters, Maiman manages to convey an entire personality in a few, well-chosen words. We tolerate K.T. because Robin loves her, we also can't stand the sniveling, whining Lurlene. I highly recommend Someone to Watch even if you haven't read the previous Robin Miller Mysteries.

Both Greener Than Grass and Someone to Watch are available at your local bookstore or by mail for $10.95 from Naiad Press Inc., P.O. Box 10543, Tallahassee, FL 32302. Please include 15% postage and handling. Complete catalogs are available upon request.

COMMITMENT

Commitment. Something we, at first,
Swore to.
We were going to be together even in death.
You 95. Me 91.
Then, you broke our commitment.
Said you couldn't handle the intensity.
You wanted to be free.
You became free.
You now have another who wears a matching commitment ring on her finger.
You became free to make another commitment.
I wonder when my freedom will come.

Are You A People Person?

You've seen them—they are the women that always seem to be surrounded with people. They love social activities and make new friends with ease. Are you one of them? Or, do you find it difficult to keep old friends, much less make new ones? Answer the questions below to find out if you are a "people person".

ANSWER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS TRUE OR FALSE

1. I think there is some good in everyone, no matter how bad they may appear at first.
2. I am not comfortable at big, crowded parties.
3. I am a very dependable person. I don't like to shock or disappoint anyone.
4. I believe in honesty at all costs. The truth, no matter how much it hurts, is always better than a lie.
5. I like to play "hard to get" with lovers and friends.
6. I have a lot of friends I can call on in time of need.
7. When I have to tell someone "No", I try to be as nice as possible.
8. People with strong opinions make me nervous.
9. I know I've got faults, I know what they are, and I don't mind admitting them.

10. I don't like to do favors, no matter how small, for people I am not close to.

11. I have a very hard time choosing a gift for anybody.

12. I think my life has been a lot of fun and very educational, even the bad parts.

13. I can always impress someone when I want to.

14. I don't care for people who talk too much.

15. If I meet someone I want for a friend or lover, I don't give up until I've "got" them.

IF YOU SCORED:

0-10 points

You can be a difficult person to get to know. You may appear to be a bit of a snob at times. You have a very strong will and you are rarely willing to put yourself out for anyone. Your best asset in dealing with people is your ability to find and keep friends. Although it is difficult to get to know you, and even harder to win you over, it is well worth the effort. You are a devoted friend.

11-20 points

You are very good at making new friends, but you tend to be very selective. You may seem "standoffish" until you are comfortable, and may keep an emotional distance even with close friend. You can be charming and charismatic, but generally will not go out of your way to impress others or find friends. You wait for them to come to you.

21-30 points

You are truly great at making friends. People love to be around you. You have a knack for making people feel important and good about themselves. You are warm and affectionate. There are few people that you truly dislike, and as a result, there are very few people who dislike you!

HOROSCOPE

WHAT'S IN THE STARS FOR YOU THIS MONTH?

ARIES

Your work life and home life could be at odds during the first part of July. Give equal time to both to avoid problems. After the 10th you'll have time for social outings that give you the opportunity to meet new friends. Stay in the background at work around the 17th. Co-workers can be touchy right now and it won't take much to set off a confrontation. Someone you consider a friend could be hinting at a more serious relationship toward month's end.

TAURUS

Avoid arguing over who's to blame for a problem during the first part of July. Set your sights on solving it instead of finger-pointing. Someone in power is watching you around the 16th. A bold career move could pay off now. Pay attention to the advice of a loved one towards month's end. It could mean the difference between success and failure. If you need help handling a situation don't hesitate to ask for it.

GEMINI

Although practical matters are at the forefront during July, it won't hurt to let your hair down a bit and get away for a short vacation. After the 17th you may have put your personal concerns aside and concentrate on taking care of conflicts that arise in your family. Don't put your trust in someone you met recently — trust your old friends to steer you in the right direction on an important decision towards month's end.

CANCER

You may be feeling a bit restless during the first part of July. A change of scenery could be just the ticket to lift your spirits. After the 15th someone you were kind to in the past could repay you by giving you a boost up the career ladder. Towards month's end you may find that money just slips through your fingers. Leave your checkbook at home to keep your spending in check.

LEO

A long-term goal you've been working towards for some time can be reached during July. The secret is to relax and let things follow their own course. An argument with a loved one after the 17th could be cleared up in no time if you are willing to compromise. Your personal appeal is at a peak towards month's end. Use it to further career interests and make new friends.

VIRGO

A promotion or an increase in pay could be in the works during the first part of July. Added responsibilities may wear you down at first, but you'll bounce back soon enough. After the 17th a long-standing family feud could erupt into fireworks. Try to stay out of the way and don't pass judgement. Your involvement will only make things worse. To avoid conflict, try to divide your time evenly between work and home towards month's end.

LIBRA

You may have to give in on an ongoing argument to maintain a relationship during the first part of July. After the 9th you'll have a chance to prove your worth to the higher-ups at work. A good impression now could put your career on the fast track! Your social life also picks up after mid-month, but don't overdo it. You'll need all your energy to take care of a dispute at home towards month's end.

SCORPIO

Romance is in the air and a serious commitment could result during the first two weeks of July. After the 14th the focus will switch to career matters. It will pay for you to keep a watchful eye on a competitive co-worker who may be undermining your efforts. Towards month's end you may have to put career on the back burner once again as you focus on a family problem that needs resolving.

SAGITTARIUS

Money and partnership matters could be under stress during the first part of July. Take your partner's wishes into consideration before you act to avoid emotional upset. Plans you've had in the making for some time could come to fruition if you play your cards right. After the 15th you should start "tooting your own horn" at work. Your boss may not notice what great work you've been doing if you don't point it out!

CAPRICORN

Although the focus will be on home and family during the first week of July, you may find yourself away from home more than you'd like due to business and social activities. Things will settle down after the 14th and allow you to (finally) focus on problems that need your attention at home. You'll be itching to get out of town during the last part of the month, but it isn't in the cards. Tend to personal obligations now so that you can get away early next month.

AQUARIUS

Your finances could be a bit tricky early in July. You'll need a lot of planning and a little luck to smooth out money matters this month. Job demands will keep you close to home all month, but you can find time to get away for fun and relaxation if you will put your nose to the grindstone during working hours. Don't let all this work stress you out, you could get emotional and say things you don't mean to someone close to you.

PISCES

Home and family responsibilities may be weighing you down during the first week of July. Make time to get away, if only for a night, to lift your spirits. A creative project begun around the first of July could pay off big later in the month. Your timing is great and your ideas are on target. Take advantage of this to boost your career, improve your finances and put some "zing" in your love life.
