ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

All thanks to God, who strengthened me to finish this research and all the degree requirements during the challenging time of the pandemic caused by COVID-19. The people who helped me out throughout my journey are many. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Richard Zielinski, and to my committee members, Dr. David Howard, Dr. Jennifer Saltzstein, Dr. Jeffery Swinkin, and Dr. John Jones. I thank you for supporting my decision to choose my research topic and for providing guidance and feedback. I also want to thank Dr. Elizabeth Avery for all the assistance. Sincere thanks to Dr. Matthew Stock, to the staff at OU Fine Arts Library in Norman and OU Tulsa library, for assistance and for providing all the materials I requested for my research. I am deeply grateful to my parents Georges and Easter, my brother Dr. Samuel for your comments, prayers, and support. Special thanks go to my amazing husband Nabil for all your support and sacrifice, my son John, and my daughter Joy for understanding my dual responsibilities as a mother and a student, and for reviewing my document.

Finishing my last music recital during the pandemic would not have been possible without the assistance of all my beloved friends at Asbury Church in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Especially the music director and conductor Mr. Michael Kemp for providing the time, support and for participating in singing as well. I am in debt to Sheryl Martin and all members of Asbury church choir, organist, pianist, and Orchestra. My special thanks also to all OU student singers and instrumentalists, who were part of all my recitals. I would like to thank my talented friend from Jordan Raad Alzabin for providing the string quartet arrangement, and many thanks to Glades Khamoo for singing the solo hymn in the final recital remotely from Chicago. I am also grateful to Dr. Edward Torikian from the Holy Spirit University of Kaslik (USEK), Lebanon, for the orchestration of two Syriac hymns. My deepest appreciation goes to the Vice - President of the University of Salamanca in Spain Dr. Efrem Yildiz for your insightful comments, suggestions, and words of encouragement.

I cannot forget to thank Deacon Awgen Badine from the Assyrian Church of the East in Arizona for providing the main liturgical books and the music CDs of the chants and madrashé which were performed by Deacon Yousif Nooru. Thank you to Ms. Dena Ismail from Chicago for sending me a chant book. I thank Dr. Samir Yohanna, the Genral of the Antonian Order of the Chaldeans in Erbil, Iraq for providing the sound files and other useful material for my study. My appreciation goes also to Pastor Marwan Abi Nader of the Maronite Church of Tulsa, Ok for your interest and assistance.

I would like to express my deepest appreciation to Professor Sebastian Brock for your enormous contribution in the field of Syriac studies, which I have benefited from. Moreover, I am deeply grateful for your words of encouragement and for all the time you spent translating the homily of Mar Narsai that I requested for this study. In addition, I would like to thank you for editing my translation of the chant text. I would also like to thank Dr. Joseph Amar for your guidance on the Syriac text and the English translation of the homily memra of St. Jacob on Saint Ephrem.

A special thanks to our beloved Assyrian singer Ms. Linda George in Chicago for your insights on the chants' tunes and your warm encouragement. My special thanks to the Oud player, Mr. Nenos Yousef in Sweden for transcribing the chants' music and providing the notation of the Maqam scales. Lastly, this study would not have been finished without the enormous help of the choir teacher at the Assyrian Church of the East in Toronto Canada Ms. Farida Binyamin Adam, who not only recorded the chants but also was an immense help for explaining the liturgy, the Assyrian chant text, and the performance practice of the chants. Ms. Farida has been teaching the Assyrian language and choirs for forty years in Iraq, Jordan, and later in Canada. I would not have been able to complete this research without all the assistance I received from each and every person listed above. It was essential to have such wonderful and professional individuals to guide me throughout my research.

Lastly, I would like to thank all the people and the organizations that worked on “Syri.ac” the open-access comprehensive bibliography of Syriac resources website especially the University of Oklahoma and Princeton University, who hosted the “Syri.ac” website. This online source was one of the main sources for my research to find all the manuscripts of the liturgical books that include all the chants. The “Syri.ac” website includes more than 3,600 digitized manuscripts and many catalogues. The website provides a full description of each manuscript and many other resources of Syriac scholarship in different languages. Although the digitized manuscripts were available from their original websites or libraries, it was hard to find the topics, chants, or writers without the organizing offered by Syri.ac website.

PREFACE

As an Assyrian, born and raised in my country Iraq, I witnessed many events that were not only challenging for the Assyrian families but also were devastating. Growing up in Iraq during the wars was not an easy time. Keeping our language alive was also not easy. Although all Assyrian families spoke in Assyrian with their children at homes and gatherings, reading and writing our language was not allowed in public or private schools. Therefore, our Assyrian churches offered to teach the Assyrian language to preserve our language and culture. However, not every church could offer to do so.

My parents insisted on taking my brother and me to our Ancient Church of the East in Baghdad to learn how to read and write our Assyrian language properly. The classes were held during the extremely hot summer of Baghdad, where the temperature usually is above 100°F, knowing that the classes were held outdoor in the open area around the church! When I remember those days, despite the hot dry weather, it was a precious time, and I can see how it influenced and shaped my life later. If I did not get that initial learning, I would not have been able today to read my language in ancient manuscripts and apply it to my field of study.

When I decided to write on the chants of the Church of the East, I aimed to provide the textual and musical information, the genres, and styles of the chants in the context of their liturgical, cultural, and historical background. Such as the Antiphons of the Martyrs, or the Women's choirs. Therefore, in this research, I provided some information on events that occurred throughout the Church history, including the massacres and genocides that directly affected the existence of the chants, language, ancient churches, and monasteries. These churches and monasteries were the home of all the ancient manuscripts that contained the oldest Christian history, liturgical books, and chants.

ABSTRACT

The Assyrian or Syriac Chants of the Church of the East existed from the first centuries of Christianity in Mesopotamia; however, the earliest survived chants are by Mar Aprem from the fourth century. Therefore, the current research examines the earliest survived chants and hymns composed by the church theologians and poets between the fourth and seventh centuries. Twenty chants and hymns written in Syriac and translated to English are selected for this study. These examples cover different chant styles and genres of the Church of the East liturgical Feasts, Sundays, and Ordinary days. The chants and hymns selected include the most five main genres used in the liturgy of the Church of the East, which are continuously performed until the present time.

Soghyāthā, Madrāshe, Tešbhatha, `Onyatha, and Memrē are the five main genres of the Church of the East hymnody repertoire. Moreover, the tunes qale of the chants and hymns are provided according to the Eastern Rite of the Church of the East performance practices. These qale are practiced within the Assyrian and the Ancient Churches of the East in Iraq as well as in all dioceses of the Churches around the world. The musical Maqam scales of the qale are identified for each chant or hymn in the information sheet provided in this study.

Most of the twenty chants and hymns are by Mar Aprem (Ephrem), Mar Marutha of Maypherqat, Mar Narsai, and Mar Baḅai the Great. This research also provides detailed information about the earliest known church women's choirs. Furthermore, it examines fourth-century women's choirs responsibilities on Biblical teaching in their communities in addition to their singing in the church. Segments of the homily memrā of Mar Ya'quḅ (Jacob of Serugh) on Mar Aprem in the original Syriac text and an English translation are provided to support the role of the women's choirs in the church.

CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION

Statement of Purpose

Christian Assyrians have practiced their Christian faith through worshipping chants and hymns for over two thousand years in Mesopotamia within the Syriac tradition. The region that is currently Iraq, Syria, and parts of Turkey was under different foreign rule between the 6th century BC and 7th century AD. Iraq was under the Persian, Seleucid, Sasanian, and lastly under Arab rule since the invasions in the 7th century. Syriac chants managed to survive all these years despite the persecution and the loss of thousands of manuscripts due to the many invasions that occurred in the first millennium.

This study aims to teach about the chants and hymns of the Syriac tradition from the original liturgical sources of the Church of the East. I have selected twenty chants and hymns from the main liturgical books of the Church, which cover different church seasons and feasts. These examples are taken from the early literature between the fourth and seventh centuries. This study will analyze the text and music of various chants. In addition, it will define and provide information about the performance practices of the five main genres of the chants and hymns, which are Soghyāthā, Madrāshe, Tešbḥatha, Onyatha, and Memrē. Moreover, audio files of each of the selected hymns will be provided as a SoundCloud audio file in the information sheet in chapter five. These chants are performed by a native Assyrian choir teacher malpanitha Ms. Farida Benyamin Adam. Farida learned these chants in her local church in the Assyrian village of Dure in Barwari Bala in northern Iraq. It is essential to mention that Ms. Farida learned the chants by the aural/oral approach; she has never had any Western or Oriental Maqam training.

Significance of the Study

In his book Singer of the Word of God, Brook explains the distinctive features of the Syriac Orient and says that:

Syriac is just a dialect of Aramaic, the everyday language of Jesus and of the Jewish society of his time. Early Syriac Christianity thus provides us with a transmitter of the Christian message in the closest form attainable to its original Semitic dress. Indicative of this is the fact that the Lord's Prayer, as still said today in Syriac, is virtually identical with modern scholars' reconstruction of the first-century Aramaic wording of the prayer, translated back from the Greek Gospels of Matthew and Luke. Not surprisingly, then, it is early Syriac Christianity which retains the closest links with Christianity's Jewish roots, and which shares many exegetical traditions with Rabbinic Judaism that are not preserved elsewhere in early Christianity.¹

The Syriac orient churches have two traditions, East and West. Each tradition has developed its own chant repertoire, melodies, and practices. However, both rites share hymns written by poets and theologians such as Mar Aprem, who lived and composed in the fourth century.

Several articles and dissertations document and analyze the Syriac chants of the West Rite tradition. However, fewer studies have been published in the East Rite tradition. Hundreds of the Assyrian chants that have been aurally- orally transmitted through the Church Fathers exist only in the original liturgical church books. The chants are still in their original format, style of a prose with a specific punctuation to demarcate the end of each line or verse. Even with the first printed versions of the liturgical books in 1960, the text of the chants and hymns is kept in the same format of the manuscripts.

Ludwig Bonvin clearly states the importance of the Oriental liturgical music in his study of the Gregorian chant rhythm and the Latin Liturgical chant, which was originally emphasized by Dom Jeannin.² Therefore, it is essential to shed light on and study this ancient form of chants in Christianity. Bonvin also agrees with Jeannin's experimental conclusions. After examining hundreds of melodies, Jeannin observed the presence of the modern note system in the old Syriac chants that uses variety of note duration.³ Bonvin explains that Oriental chants were orally transmitted to other cultures and regions, and they would normally be modified. Therefore, this study will help researchers to learn about some of the main genres of the chants in the Church of the East tradition.

The study of the performance practices of the chants is also significantly beneficial because it teaches us about the cultural life of the church singers. The participation of the women's choirs in the church and the role of the women in the biblical teaching in their communities are found to be unique practices within the Church of the East tradition since the 4th century.⁴

Future research can be achieved by providing music notation of the chants with the Roman transliteration of the Syriac text. Thus, the Syriac chant tradition could be integrated into the world choral repertoire. The music of the Syriac chants includes microtonal pitches (half-flat) and (half-sharp) in their melodies. These are known in the Western world as Oriental modes. In the Middle East, these individual modes are known in Arabic as Maqam, also Makom in Hebrew, which means place.⁵ Although the word is derived from the Aramaic root qam (the action of rising, changing place from a sitting to a standing position, the term Maqam has not been used in the Syriac liturgical books to indicate a musical mode.

Scope and Limitations

This study aims to provide sufficient background information on, and melodic analysis of the Syriac chants practiced in the Assyrian and Ancient churches of the East. The selected chants in this study are limited to only twenty examples of different liturgical seasons or feasts of the church. Men and women choirs sing these chants, a practice that was always present in the church until now. I will not explain the liturgy of the Church of the East; however, much valuable information that relates to the hymns and their practices will be provided throughout. We will also analyze the content, style, genre, and rhythmic meters of the selected chants.

The chants and hymns provided in this study are from the main liturgical books of the church, which are the Ḥudra or Khodra and Turgama.⁶ This study will discuss some examples of chants that are performed during most of the main church feasts and other occasions. Due to the limited number of chants selected in this study, I will not make definite conclusions about the number of chants practiced by the East Rite tradition in each genre. Nor will the study discuss or trace the connections and the influences of the Syriac chants of the Church of the East on other chant practices such as Ethiopian, Ambrosian, or Gregorian chants.

⁶ Also, Khudra the word lit. “Cycle.” It comprises prayers, chants, and hymns for the whole church liturgical calendar. See Mar Awa Royel, “A Survey of the Christology of the Assyrian Church of the East as Expressed in the Ḥudra,” Church of Beth Kokheh Journal, (2016): 3. Also see, Alessandro Mengozzi, “The Late East-Syriac Genre of the Turgāmā: Forms, Function, Vitality in the Liturgy,” Христiанскiй Востокъ 8, no. 14 (2017): 172.

All the chants chosen for this study were written by several of the early church writers such as Mar Ephrem (c.306-373),⁷ Mar Narsai (c.399- c.502),⁸ Jacob of Serugh (c.451-521),⁹ and Mar Babai the Great (ca. 551-628).¹⁰ The original Syriac text of the chants with English translation will be included for all chants and hymns. It is useful to point out that I typed the Syriac text of the chants in the hymnal style format (refrain/verses). By organizing the hymns in this format, the Syriac text will be easier to read and sing.

Structure and Procedure

Chapter One will include the introduction, the purpose, the significance and the limitations of the study. Chapter Two provides a historical background on the Assyrian music and the writing system. In Chapter Three, I will provide historic information regarding the Church of the East, in addition, I will present the most conspicuous figures of the Church, who composed many chants in the early third to seventh centuries AD. In Chapter Four, I will discuss the chants topics, genres, and styles. Moreover, I will introduce the first women's choir in the history of Christianity. Chapter Five will include all twenty examples of the chants and hymns in Syriac and English translation. In addition, I will provide an information sheet for each chant that includes the writer, the musical mode, and the audio files of the Maqams and the chants. It was essential for the purpose of this study to choose a singer who learned the chants by listening and who had previous musical training. Any musical training, whether in eastern (Maqam) or western music would have reshaped the singer's way of performing the tunes. Ms. Farida was also given the choice to start from a comfortable pitch without interfering with her style of singing.

The singer performed the chants the same way she would perform at church. She adds ornamentation and improvises between the verses when the chant has a solo part such as in the madrāsha genre. It is worth noting that the acappella style in the singing of these chants was important at the stage, for documenting and analyzing the tunes. In addition, Syriac chants melodies have a microtonal system (half-flat and half-sharp), therefore accompanying the singer with an eastern tuning string or keyboard instrument will limit the singer's ability to sing the right tune. It is impossible to accompany most Syriac chants with a western tuned instrument because it will limit the singer in the major and minor keys. Previous attempts have been made by western musicians, who provided notations of the Syriac chants, but all in major and minor keys.

Finally, chapter six will include the conclusion; in addition, I will provide a list that includes all the main ecclesiastical terms that are related to the chants and hymns found in the book of Ḥudra or other liturgical books. This list will be beneficial for researchers, who are interested in the Syriac chants tradition. The list is provided in both English / Syriac and Syriac/English alphabetical systems for faster and easier search.

CHAPTER 2: HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

The Assyrians

“The Assyrian homeland is in northern Mesopotamia, present-day Iraq, where the ancient cities of Assur and Nineveh were built.”¹ The region is in the ancient Near East which, under the Neo-Assyrian Empire, reached from Mesopotamia (modern-day Iraq) through Asia Minor (modern Turkey) and down through Egypt. The empire began at the city of Ashur located in Mesopotamia north-east of Babylon.

The Assyrian empire lasted from 2500 BC to 612 BC. The Assyrians were Semitic people, who spoke and wrote Akkadian, an eastern Semitic language. The writing system is known as cuneiform (wedge-shape). Later, Akkadian was gradually replaced by the Aramaic language, which became more popular at that time, because it was easier than Akkadian that had more than 700 syllables.

Assyrian history was marked by many important inventions that had great impact on the world. In 1850s, Sir Austen Henry Layard, an English archaeologists discovered about half a million cuneiform tablets and fragments in the capital city of Nineveh as well as other Near Eastern cities.² These tablets, along with many other large stone sculptures and reliefs including the winged bulls Lamassu, were transferred to the British Museum.³ The discovery included the oldest surviving royal library in the world. This library belonged to the Assyrian king Ashurbanipal as his personal library. Ashurbanipal ruled Assyria in the 7th c. BC (668- c.630 BC).

³ Lamassu, is an Assyrian protective deity. It is a hybrid of a human, bird, and a bull or lion.

Aramaic was used as a language of trade and diplomacy by the empires of the Assyrians and the Babylonians. Aramaic is also one of the three languages that the Bible was written, along with Hebrew and Greek. Assyria was overthrown by the Babylonians, Persians and the Medes in 612 BC. During the chaos in 2003, thousands of pieces (around 15,000) and cuneiform tablets went missing from the Iraqi Museum. Among the looted items was the golden harp of Ur.⁴

Later, Assyrian archeological sites were damaged and some of the wing bulls were destroyed by the Islamic State (ISIS). Few items were returned to Iraq, which are again not in safe hands, because of all the instability in the country. The missing cuneiform tablets are invaluable not only to the Assyrian or Babylonian history, but to the cultural heritage of the humanity.

Music and Poetry

Music and poetry held an essential role in Mesopotamia. The first ever known author, poet and composer was Enheduanna, a female from the city of Ur currently in southern Iraq, who lived between (2285-2250) BC. She wrote an epic poem and a cycle of hymns to the goddess Innana in the temple of Sumer. Enheduanna was a Sumerian high priestess and princess, she was the daughter of king Sargon the Great of Akkad.⁵ Many different types of musical instruments were invented in Mesopotamian regions of Sumer, Assyria, and Babylonia. Old and recent discoveries show advanced work in their music theory and tuning systems as well. Archeologists have identified several Mesopotamian tablets that contain technical information, songs, and pitch sets written as text, in addition to tuning system text written on the tablets. The discovery of the physical remains of musical instruments at the site of Ur including two harps and nine lyres, helped the researchers learn more about the musical theory used at the time. The Assyrian documents show that Assyrian Female musicians also performed music in temples and royal palaces. The Assyrian female musicians played all types of music instruments such as harps, lyres, lutes, wind, flutes, trumpets, as well as percussion instruments. Both male and female musicians participated in different types of musical activities such as in victory celebrations, banquets, and religious events.⁶

The instruments were mainly played while worshiping their gods in their temples. Varieties of musical instruments were played during the religious ceremonies and royal processions.⁷ However, the use of the instruments for worshiping purposes in Mesopotamia among Assyrians and other ethnicities after conversion to Christianity was unfavorable, due to their association with paganism during the ancient times.

Until the twentieth century, we did not know much about the music theory of the ancient civilization of Mesopotamia. Richard Dumbrill in his book “Semitic Music Theory” explains in detail the oldest music theory ever known in the world.⁸ He covered the period from around 3,200 years BC to the second century AD. His conclusions are based on examining cuneiform tablets that had song text and musical interval notation. One of the tablets (CBS 1766) was first titled as an “Astronomical Tablet from the Temple Library. Probably because the tablet consists of a heptagram at the top and a table of eleven column in the bottom on the tablet.⁹ Later on, it appeared to be a music tuning method. This tablet is considered the first evidence of heptatonism in the Babylonian music theory. The seven points of the star included the names of the strings from (1-7).¹⁰ Dumbrill explains that:

Babylonian scholarship spread to Greece from the late eighth century BC, during the Orientalizing Period, and then metastasized into the Roman Empire. It reached Western shores after the looting of libraries of the Levant during Urban II's first crusade in the late eleventh century, and later campaigns. Meanwhile, the earliest codex preserving Ancient Greek music theory was collated on the west bank of the Tigris, in Mesopotamia, on the fourteenth of January 1040 of our era by a scribe aptly responding to the name of Nikolaos Kalligraphos. The manuscript is hosted at the University of Heidelberg as Heidelbergensis Palatinus gr. 281.

Dumbrill summarizes his conclusions, saying that:

The Ecclesiastical modes had been conceptualists in Semitic Babylonia almost three thousand years before they infiltrated Western liturgy with the early proselytism of Levantine Christianity and with and with the proliferation of the most ancient of Jewish cantillations preserved by the Sephardim in the Synagogues of al-Andalus and of the Maghrib. Ancient Near-Eastern pre-literate music did not come from numbers but from the triradicality of its languages translating spontaneously into the first three-pitched sonemes which conjoined into chains of thirds, to make music.¹¹

He concludes that the cuneiform tablets discovered in the late nineteenth century show that:

The Ancient Near-East was the seat of the oldest and most sophisticated musical systems of all times. He also explains that the most ancient and fundamental element of Semitic music theory was a group of three pitches, each separated from the other by an interval.¹²

Moreover, he adds that religious songs in the monasteries and other places in the region still use the tritonic system, which is found in Aramaic and Syriac languages. Dumbrill uses the original Akkadian musical terms throughout his study including the names of pitches, intervals, and strings. The translation into English could be found in the Chicago Assyrian Dictionary.¹³

The Oriental Institute at The University of Chicago worked on a project called The Chicago Assyrian Dictionary (CAD), which was completed after ninety years (2010). The dictionary was completed after inscribing hundreds of thousands of clay tablets, the source material ranges in time from the third millennium B.C. to the first century A.D.¹⁴ The Dictionary includes information of the political/cultural history, and all the the achievements in the sciences and arts. I was astonished when I started to read through the dictionary. Many of what I was reading is still part of our everyday conversations. Comparing ancient Assyrian language to our current Assyrian Aramaic would be an interesting future project in the field of Near- East languages. I also found out that the ancient Assyrians used different words to describe different types of singers or musicians including some words that are still in use today.

Types of Singers in Assyria:

- 1- A specialist singer, who sings in temples.
- 2- The chanter, who chants in a funeral of Assyrian kings.
- 3- The soft singer who chants mournfully.
- 4- Choir of males and females.
- 5- Chief of singers.

- 6- The singer who performs secular songs.
- 7- To sing or a Song, a composition with or without instrumental accompaniment is zamarū.¹⁵
- 8- And the last type is the usual male or female singer, which we still use the same words in Assyrian Aramaic (Syriac) for the male zammeru in old Assyrian, now zamara. And zammerta for a female singer in old Assyrian, now zamarta.

Mesopotamian poems from in Sumer,¹⁶ Babylon and Assyria, shared a disputation poem genre. Some of these dispute poems were written with an acrostic style, which share the name of the poet.¹⁷

Cohen and Nathan define this poetic genre in Mesopotamian Wisdom Literature as:

Disputation poems are poetic compositions with a tripartite structure. The first part is the introduction. It sets the scene in mythical times, when the world was created, introducing two opposing protagonists. The second part, which form the main body of the work is a back-and-forth engagement between the two protagonists. The third part is the declaration of the winner of the disputation, either by the gods or by the king.¹⁸

The characters of the disputations have non-human subjects, such as Birds and Fish, Date Palm and Tamarisk, Copper and Silver, and Winter and Summer. Six Sumerian and eight Akkadian dispute poems are collected in the same poetic genre from the cuneiform tablets.¹⁹ The disputation poems continued to be practiced in the Christian Syriac literature of Mesopotamia.

We have survived hymns of this genre composed by Mar Aprem, Mar Narsai and by anonymous poets between fourth and sixth centuries. About fifty dispute poems in this genre are found in the Syriac literature.²⁰

We notice how poets of the early church replaced the old subjects with biblical stories and characters. Brock affirms that this genre was well known in ancient Mesopotamia since the second millennium BC. He adds that later poets Christianized this style with biblical stories.²¹ Two dispute hymns soghyāthā in Syriac with English translation are selected in chapter five. These soghyāthā are found the liturgical books of the Church of the East and are well known to the choirs and congregation.²² The continuity of the language, music, and writing style in Beth Nahrain help us understand that the cultural heritage will survive among its indigenous people no matter who is taking control over the land.

The Writing System

As mentioned above, the Assyrian Aramaic existed since about seventh centuries BC and was gradually replacing the Akkadian language in Assyrian, Babylonian and the Levant. The Assyrian Aramaic language became official in the Assyrian Empire during the reign of Tiglath-Pileser III (745-727 BC). “Syriac is a dialect of Aramaic, which was the imperial language of ancient Assyria in the first millennium BC. During the Roman Empire, was still the main language spoken by Jews in the provinces of Judea and Palestine, including Jesus himself.”²³

According to Yildiz, “The Aramaic language is usually divided into five distinct phases: Ancient, Official, Middle, Late and Modern Aramaic.”²⁴ Each phase is subdivided into several languages that are emerged from Ancient Aramaic (10th to 7th BC). The Syriac text of the chants included in the current research falls under the late or classical Aramaic period (200 AD to 13th century).²⁵ The Syriac language is the language used in the Church of the East literature since the beginning of Christianity until the present day.²⁶ The chants and hymns included in this document belong to the period between fourth and seventh centuries.

²⁶ The Assyrian Aramaic (Assyrian) or Syriac language, will be used interchangeably throughout the study to refer to the same language, which also known as Classic Syriac, which is a dialect of the Aramaic language. Since both terms have been used by scholars in the literature in addition to other terms such as Syrian, the author will use Assyrian and Syriac throughout the study. The ancient Assyrians adapted the writing system of the Aramaic language around the 8th century BC to gradually replace the complicated Akkadian cuneiform writing system. Later Aramaic became a lingua franca in the Middle East. Today, most of the Assyrians around the world use vernacular dialects in everyday communication that still uses classic Syriac, but also have many loaned words. However, most of the Churches belonged to the Church of the East still rely on the original language that dates from the first centuries. Therefore, the use of Assyrian language in this study does not refer to the ancient Assyrian language, which used the Akkadian cuneiform script in Mesopotamia (Beth Nahrain).

As Brock states, "this era is considered the period of the golden age of the Syriac literature, the age produced the most creative writers."²⁷

Consonants and Vowels

The Assyrian Aramaic writing system is written from right to left. The alphabetic ālap bēth system consists of twenty-two consonant letters. Ancient manuscripts were written in 'Eṣṭrangēlā script ܐܘܪܝܢܐ (lit. rounded) this script is the earliest Syriac script. Another two scripts developed from 'Eṣṭrangēlā, the Eastern Maḏnḥāyā ܡܕܢܚܝܐ and the Western Ma`rḇāyā known as Serṭā ܣܪܬܐ (lit. Line). The two dialects emerged after the schism that occurred in 525 AD. Although two Syriac scripts were used after the schism, the differences appeared in the pronunciation only. Both Eastern and Western Syriac traditions use 'Eṣṭrangēlā script ܐܘܪܝܢܐ for writing formal text. Although, all three scripts are used until the present day, in recent publishing, 'Eṣṭrangēlā script has been used among Assyrian authors and scholars. The script used in this document is the Eastern Maḏnḥāyā because it is the same script used in the liturgical books. The alphabetical letters in both 'Eṣṭrangēlā and Maḏnḥāyā scripts with the transcription are illustrated in table 1.

Vowels were added during the development stage of the Madnhāyā script. The vowels are added to the consonant letters in forms of diacritical marks above and beneath the letters.

The vowel shapes also are different between the Eastern and western dialects. The vowels used in table (2) are according to the Eastern dialect.

It is also important to mention that there are six consonant letters that can be pronounced with different sounds than their original sounds when adding a dot or a special mark underneath them.

These different sounds are produced due to grammatical rules of Qušāya ܩܘܫܝܐ and Rukākhā

ܩܘܫܝܐ.²⁸ Table (3) illustrates these letters in their original and new sounds.²⁹ If a diagonal short line is over one of the letters, it makes that letter silent. This sign of the silent is called Mbaṭlānā ܡܒܐܬܠܢܐ (to cancel the sound). The sign is always placed above the silenced letter such as (ܘ̇).

For the plural form of the word in Syriac, two thick dots are placed over the letter called Syāmē ܣܝܡܝܐ (lit. placed).³⁰ A good example of using all the vowels zāw‘ē ܙܘܘܥܝܐ and the changed sounds, is to look at the Syriac text of the first and second hymns in chapter five in this study.

Yildiz, explains that Emphatic, guttural, and aspirated consonant letters (ܒ̣, ܓ̣, ܕ̣, ܟ̣, ܦ̣, ܬ̣) sometimes are shifted from their original pronunciation. Letter (ܫ hēth) in modern days is mostly pronounced as ܫ̣ (kh, ḳ) sound instead of (h), the same with (ܩ qop) being pronounced as letter (ܩ̣ kāp).³¹ These differences are only noticed in the pronunciation not in the writing.

Other sounds such as (ܝ̣ = j), and (ܥ̣ = ch) are found in modern day writings, are not within the original Syriac sounds. These letters are used to vocalize foreign words such as names, cities etc. Maintaining the proper pronunciation of a language for over two thousand year is challenging to a nation, when millions of its native speakers are scattered all around the world with substantial influence of new languages, sounds, and cultures.

CHAPTER 3: THE CHURCH OF THE EAST

An Overview on the History of the Church

The Church of the East is originated in the land of Mesopotamia and Beth Nahrain, the land between the rivers of Tigris and Euphrates.¹ The Church of the East traces back its doctrine and traditions to the time of the apostles when Christianity spread east from Jerusalem to Beth Nahrain. The church of the East is known as an Apostolic Church, because it traces its original teaching back to the apostle Thomas, one of the twelve disciples, and Mar Addai (known as St. Thaddeus) of (Urhay/Edessa), and his disciples (Aggai and Mar Mari).²

The Church of the East is one of the oriental church families of Eastern Christianity that include the Greek Orthodox and Coptic Church. It is essential to mention that The Church of the East is widely known in the literature under the term “Nestorian Church” and this term is still used in some studies and books. Sebastian Brock explains that it is inappropriate and misleading term to name this Ancient Apostolic church. He explained in detail how using that term led to the misunderstanding of the Church of the East Christology. This was a result of the controversy with other churches.³

Syriac was the dominant language used in literature, education, and liturgical books of Christian faith in the region of Mesopotamia. Theologians and writers such as Afrahat, Mar Ephrem, Mar Babai the great, Mar Narsai, Jacob of Serugh, and many others in later centuries were prolific writers of the church and played a significant role in people’s spiritual lives.

They conveyed important theological/biblical subjects and stories through teaching, as well as their chants and hymns. The chants were not accompanied by musical instruments, and they are still absent in many Assyrian churches. Also, there is no evidence of any survived notation system.

The oral transition of the chants from one generation to another played a key role in preserving the tunes Qīnātha of chant to this day.⁴ The Syriac chants are present within the liturgy of several Eastern Church traditions. The West Syriac tradition includes the Syrian Orthodox Church of Antioch, the Malankara Orthodox Church of India, the Maronite, Syro-Malankara, and Syriac Catholic Churches. The East Syriac tradition is practiced by the Assyrian and the Ancient Churches of the East in addition to The Chaldean Catholic Church and the Syro-Malabar Churches of India, who are in union with Rome, the church continued practicing its original liturgy of the Church of the East.⁵ Although some orient churches share some of the same chant text, the qale or the melodies are sometimes similar, but many times are entirely different. In fact, the churches developed their own melodies according to the location and the affiliation of each church.

Some of the manuscripts that survived all these centuries, were collected from ancient churches and monasteries, some of which still exist in Iraq and Syria. Nevertheless, many other manuscripts have been lost due to the destruction of the churches and monasteries by different groups throughout the centuries. The latest major destruction happened in 2014 when the Islamic State known as ISIS took control over the cities in northern Iraq. ISIS looted, burned and demolished many churches and ancient monasteries.

Many of the manuscripts were saved on the day of their arrival while the Christians were fleeing their cities. A courageous and a responsible action was made by the Chaldean Archbishop of Mosul, Najib Mikhael Moussa with the help of others on the day of August 6th, 2014. Bishop Najib worked on transferring and saving about 800 manuscripts and thousands of documents from the cities in Nineveh plains while ISIS groups were entering the cities. These manuscripts were transferred in the personal cars into a safe location. Bishop Najib calls that day a black night.⁶ In February 2021, “Pope Francis was presented a historic Aramaic prayer manuscript rescued from the Islamic State's destructive occupation of northern Iraq. The book contains liturgical prayers in Aramaic for the season of Easter in the Syriac tradition.⁷

Some of the ancient churches and monasteries that belonged to the Church of the East still exist. Kokheh, is one of the oldest churches not only in Iraq, but in Christian history, this church dates from 79 AD. The church is believed to be found by Mar Mari in the first century of Christianity.⁸ The church is located in the city of Babylon southern region of Beth Nahrain (southwest of Baghdad). Although the church was destroyed in the fourth century, it was renovated and became the residence of the Patriarch's seat of the Church of the East for many centuries.⁹ The remains of the church still exist in the present day.

⁶ Archbishop Najib worked on digitizing the manuscripts and thousands of other documents that belong to the Church of the East literature in addition to other secular historic manuscripts; To listen to the interview see, Shirin Jaafari, “Iraqi archbishop who helped save ancient manuscripts from ISIS nominated for EU award,” The World News Radio, Boston, MA, Sep 30, 2020.

Saint Elias (Elijah's) Monastery in Nineveh, which was also built by the Church of the East in 590 AD. This monastery was closed and abandoned in 1743 after the massacre of the monks by the Persians; however, the monastery was still standing and in decent shape up until 2014, when ISIS took over the city of Mosul and demolished the oldest monastery in Iraq.¹⁰

Many manuscripts were saved by the church fathers and the Christian communities during challenging times of persecution and the genocides that was performed against the Christians.¹¹ Manuscripts were discovered and transferred to the west, from the eighteenth-century until now. Most of the manuscripts are kept in the Vatican, Germany, England, and France. Many of the liturgical and poetic materials such as Mar Ephrem's works were translated from Syriac language into Greek, Arabic, Latin, and later to French, German, Italian, and English.¹² The Church of the East was not a local church, but an international church that spread through its missionaries to the east and to the west of Mesopotamia. Travis states that:

By the sixth century CE, the Church of the East had preached Christianity to the Persians, Medes, Huns, and Bactrians—indeed, throughout the Middle East, from the Persian Gulf to the Caspian Sea, and even as far as India, Tibet, China, Korea, and Japan.¹³

Old monasteries were found in Saudi Arabia, and United Arab Emirates.¹⁴ The Church of the East was also present in China as well as India. The presence of the Church of the East could be traced by many locations outside Mesopotamia region. In 1986 Jubail Church was discovered in Saudi Arabia, this church is belonged to the Church of the East dated from the 4th c. In 1992, during excavations in United Arab Emirates, an old Christian monastery was discovered in Sir Bani Yas Island. This monastery was also established by the Church of the East in the 7th c.

In 1623 another mission by the Church of the East was discovered in the city of (Shee Ann) Xi'an in China. A stele with written text in both Chinese and Syriac on the front and sides of the stone, providing detailed information of the arrival dates to China. The stele also had the names of priests of the Church of the East. In addition, the stele uncovers the establishment of the Church in China, which dated from 635 AD. The phrase "Christianity as the luminous religion" was engraved on the stone of the stele. Sebastian Brock makes a clear statement that Christianity includes three main traditions:

Christianity is usually understood as comprising of two main traditions, the Latin West, consisting of the Roman Catholic and Reformed Churches, and the Greek East, represented by the Greek and Russian Orthodox Churches. Such a dichotomy ignores a third Christian tradition, that of the Syriac and other Oriental Churches of the Middle East, which were cut off politically from the other two traditions in the seventh century because of the Arab invasions and the advent of Islam.¹⁵

The political problems between the Byzantine and the Sassanians Empires in the previous centuries led to many religious problems between the churches in their regions as well. Nevertheless, the seventh century Arab invasions led to significant changes not only in the rule system, but also in the demographic structure of the Mesopotamia region. This happened due to the mass migration of Arabs from eastern Arabia to the new region of Mesopotamia. Consequently, there was a tangible decline in the Syriac literature after the seventh century.

¹⁵ Brock, Sebastian P. "Animals and Humans: Some Perspectives from an Eastern Christian Tradition," Journal of Animal Ethics 6, no. 1 (2016): 1.

The Arab invasions in the seventh century had a significant impact on the future of the Oriental Churches at the time, including the Church of the East, which was disconnected from the rest of the Oriental churches and from both the Byzantine and Roman churches for many centuries.¹⁶

Prominent Church Writers 4th - 7th Centuries

As Brock states, there has been three stages in the Syriac literature. The golden age, which is from the third to the seventh century, the Syriac literature during the Arab period until the thirteenth century, and the period after which persists to our present day.¹⁷ We notice that during the first period, the poets produced the most unique and innovative poems. The main three composers of the Syriac literature were Mar Aprem (Ephrem), Mar Narsai, and Mar Yaquḅ (Jacob of Serugh), these three were the most significant sources of the Syrian chants and hymns of the church of the East. However, after the schism, Mar Narsai was the main source in the liturgy and the theology teaching. Jacob of Serugh (c.451-521) was the second main source of the West Syriac tradition after Mar Aprem. Mar Ya'qub was known as the flute of the Holy Spirit. He was younger than Narsai about 20 years; however, Jacob was a contemporary poet and theologian, who knew Narsai, they both shared many genres and biblical themes. Jacob was also a historian and a Bishop of Serugh in 518 AD.

In his homily in commemoration of Saint Ephrem, Jacob defended and justified the women's choirs, by explaining that Christ offers one salvation for all people for males and females. Therefore, all are free to sing God's praise. Both traditions used the hymns of Mar

Aprem in their liturgical books. The following writers were the most influential poets, theologians, and composers of the East rite tradition between 4th - 7th centuries.

Mar Aprem, Ephrem 4th cen. (c. 306 - 373)

ܡܪܝܢܐ ܐܦܪܝܡ

Mar Aprem was a theologian, teacher, composer, and a poet of the 4th century known as a Harp of the Holy Spirit, he was born in Mesopotamia in (ca. 306). Brock believes that Saint Ephrem was born to a Christian parent, based on one of Ephrem's poems. He spent most of his life in the city of Nṣiḅin ܢܨܝܒܝܢ Nisibis.¹⁸ Griffith states that Mar Aprem refers to himself in one of his own hymns (Hymns against Heresies) as one of the pastoral staff ܐܠܠܐܢܐ 'allaānā, which is an ecclesiastical rank like a deacon.¹⁹ Mar Aprem went to the city to Orhay ܐܘܪܗܝ Edessa,²⁰ after it became under the Persian territory. Mar Aprem spent his last ten years writing until he died there in 373. He wrote in prose, stanzaic poetry, homilies memrē, and hymns madrāshe. About 400 madrāshe survived in more than 50 different meter patterns and 100 different qālē.²¹ The earliest collections of the madrāshe are found in an old manuscript dated from of 522 CE. This Manuscript is kept now in Vatican (Vat. sir. 111).²² The madrāshe were found in collections as follows:

Mar Aprem also composed verse homilies memrē in isosyllabic verses of 7+7, this meter later was named after him. The verse homilies or hymns are punctuated according to their meters. The manuscripts show a single point (.) after a simple heptasyllabic verse, two points (:) after a compound isosyllabic meters. At the end of each verse or stanza, the mark of four points (✦) is placed in red color.²³

The punctuation continued to be used in Syriac liturgical books as well as among western scholars when including Syriac text. Mar Aprem was a much-known theologian to the Greeks his poetry and his other works were translated into Greek while he was alive. Aprem was praised by Saint Jerome for his work on the Holy spirit.²⁴ In 1920, Pope Benedict XV proclaimed Saint Ephrem as a Doctor of the Universal church.²⁵

Mar Marutha was a bishop and a doctor of Maypharqat, modern- day Maifarqin, now in Turkey. Mar Marutha also was a co-convenor of the Synod (410),²⁶ which was held in Seleucia-Ctesiphon, known as al- Mada'in, located on the Tigris South of modern Baghdad.²⁷ Mar Emmanuel writes on Mar Marutha recalling the martyrs of the Church of the East: “The Church of the East laments over [her] shepherds and says, ‘Where are my nobles and blessed ones? They are not at the head of their flocks.’”²⁸ Not to be confused with Mar Marutha, who was the first ordained Metropolitan of Tagrit or Tikrit,²⁹ His ordination took place in the ancient Monastery of Saint Matthew, Dayrā d-mar mattai ܕܡܪܘܬܗ ܡܪܘܬܗ in the land of Nineveh in (624 A.D.).³⁰

Mar Awa Royel III,³¹ states that: “On account of persecutions during the early centuries of the Church, the singing of hymns was also directed toward those men and women who died for the name of Christ.” He also asserts that “Martyrdom was a phenomenon not uncommon to the Early Church, both in the West and in the East.”³² Marutha’s father was a local governor, a

Mar Narsai 5th cen. (ca.399- ca. 502)

ܡܪܢܪܫܝܐ

Mar Narsai known as the Lyre or Harp of the Holy Spirit also been known as the tongue of the East, is one of the greatest 5th century Assyrian writers of the Church of the East. Narsai was born in the village of `Ain Dulba, close to Tal M`altha, Malthai ܡܠܬܝܐ also Maltai Hill (now Malta) near the city of Beth Nuhadra, which is located about 70 km north of Mosul, Nineveh in Northern Iraq. At the age of sixteen, Narsai became orphaned, later he left the village due to the Persian persecution in his city. Narsai went to study at the Monastery of Kefar Mari.⁴² His uncle was a bishop and the school principal there. This school had also connection with the school of Urhay.⁴³

School of Urhay (also Edessa), was one of the most important schools in the East, it was a center of the Antiochenean theology. Narsai completed his studies which included history, biblical studies, Greek and other subjects. Narsai spent about ten years in the school as a student, later he became a teacher and finally a director of the school (437-459). After the school was closed in 489 by the order of the emperor Zeno over Christological controversy, Narsai left Urhay and went to Nšibin also Nisibis. Narsai found there the school of Nšibin, he became the first head of the school. Narsai organized the school on the example of the school of Urhay.⁴⁴

The school taught scripture and interpretation besides composition, debate, and Aristotelian logic. Two sets of canons have survived from the school of Nšibin that include valuable information on the school administration.⁴⁵ Vööbus states that the students were required to learn the liturgical recitation besides learning other subjects. He also mentions that the students needed to learn the quasi-musical signs and learn the places where they need to pause, lower, or raise their voices. Vööbus adds that Narsai accompanied his instructions and interpretation with chanting everyday.⁴⁶

Mar Narsai wrote in prose and verse. All his writings were for liturgical and theological purposes. He wrote in all styles of the time. His memrē (verse homilies) subjects were over many biblical subjects. Eighty-one memrē are fully survived. Mar Narsai also composed different types of hymns. He was known for his rich and elegant writing style. Most of Narsai's memrē were in twelve syllable couplets 12+12 meter. However, Narsai also wrote in the Ephremic meter of 7+7 in addition to (12 syllable couplets) three four -syllables 4+4+4/4+4+4,⁴⁷ Some of Narsai's memrē were on Creation, Elijah, the Flood, Tower of Babel, Nativity, Passion, Resurrection, on salvation and many others. His memrē were to be recited at church and at the school. "Narsai composed the true orthodox thinking by way of homilies, which was apt for sweet melodies."⁴⁸ We know from Mar `Abdisho` Bar Brikha ܡܪ ܒܪܝܟܗ ܒܪ ܐܒܕܝܫܘܐ of Nṣībīn that Narsai wrote about 360 mēm̄rē.⁴⁹

Unfortunately, only (81) memrē in full are extant.⁵⁰ Although many of his works are likely lost, we still have his hymns, which are used on daily bases in a liturgical form. Some of Narsai's surviving works have been translated to different languages.⁵¹ In 2009, Sebastian Brock published a detailed guide to Narsai's homilies memrē and soghyāthā.⁵² Narsai died in Nṣībīn at an age close to a hundred. He was buried in the church of Nṣībīn that later was named after him. Mar Narsai is considered the most influential author of the Church of the East after Mar Aprem.

In addition, Mar Babai attended the theological school of Nṣībīn. Babai spent some years in the Holy Monastery of Mount Izla, (tur izla) near Nṣībīn. This monastery was founded by Abraham the Great of Kashkar (died 586). Later Mar Babai founded a monastery and a school in his hometown of Beth Zabdai. Some of Mar Baḅai's many works included Canons for the Monks, the Book of the Union on the Divinity and the Humanity of Christ, On the origin of Palm Sunday, On the origin of the feast of the Cross, and many others. Baḅai also wrote on the lives of the martyrs and Saints and several liturgical hymns. Baḅai's works on Christology are considered one of the main sources of the theology of the Church of the East. His liturgical hymns tešbhātā such as "Blessed is the Compassionate One...", which is the first hymn in chapter five, is one of his clear teachings on the Trinity and the incarnation.

Some of Mar Baḅai's works are translated to English, Arabic and other languages. CHAPTER 4: CHANTS AND HYMNS

Church Hymnody

The Assyrian or Syriac Chants played a significant role in the early Christian history. If we think of today's hymns, they are part of every church service; however, they are also part of many Christians' normal activities. Christians around the world have access to listen to thousands of tracks, videos in all languages, therefore the function of the hymns is not limited to the church use anymore. In addition, in the first centuries, chants and hymns were an essential device in the Christian teaching.

It is essential to emphasize that the Bible as a whole book was not accessible to the early Christians, in fact they only had the Scriptures or the Hebrew Bible (Old Testament). The Latin version of the Bible known as "Vulgate" was translated in the fourth century by St. Jerome, which later became the standard Bible in the Western Latin Church.¹

The Church of the East and all other Syriac traditions used the Syriac version of the Bible called Peshitta (pšittā) ܦܫܝܬܐ.² The word pšittā means in Syriac simple as well as straight. This version of the Bible of Old and New Testaments is the common version used in the Syriac tradition churches to date. Pšittā version of the Old Testament was translated around the second century from the Hebrew Bible instead of the Greek text known as Septuagint (LXX).

The New Testament pšittā was revised in the beginning of the fifth century from the Old Syriac Gospel (third century).³ The Scriptures, Gospels or individual letters of the Apostles were kept in churches for priests and clergies to use due to the limited handwritten copies. Priests and deacons were responsible for reading and explaining the Bible for the congregation, especially when many people at that time were incapable of reading and writing. Therefore, we see the early church leaders and theologians conveyed the Christian faith and the biblical stories for the early church believers through several types of poetic forms. These sacred poems were chanted in the churches. They were essential, because they were the way if not the only way to let the worshipers to understand the faith and to memorize the biblical verses and the stories through chanting with different melodies qale.

The Liturgical Year

The liturgical year of the Church of the East according to the East Rite is divided into seasons that cover all the Feasts of the Christian faith, each season consist of weeks called in Syriac (Shabu`e). Until the 1960s, the Church of the East was following the original Julian calendar. After 1968, the Patriarch of the church along with other bishops decided to follow the liturgical seasons according to the Gregorian calendar. This change was not welcomed by all the members of the church, which eventually led to a split, creating two churches within the Church of the East. The Assyrian Church of the East follows the new calendar, and the Ancient Church of the East follows the Julian calendar. However, both churches practice the exact same liturgy and uses the same liturgical books. Although in 1995 the Ancient Church of the East changed its Christmas day celebration from January 7th to December 25th, but the church kept the old liturgical calendar of celebration the the Holy week according to the old calendar. Celebrating Easter following the Julian calendar is practiced by other Eastern and Orthodox churches in the Middle East such as in Iraq, Egypt, Syria, Jordan, and Jerusalem, as well as European countries where Greek orthodox churches are dominant such as in Greece, Russia, Armenia, and others.

According to `Abdisho` Bar Brikha (d.1318), Isho` Yahb III of Adiabene (d. 569) unified the liturgical books and arranged the liturgical book of Ḥudrā.⁴ The church calendar includes prayers, hymns and readings that are more than the actual days of the year. The liturgical calendar is divided to nine main seasons. The first and the last seasons are comprised of four weeks. The second season of the Birth of Jesus is two weeks. All the other six seasons in the middle are comprised of seven weeks. The Liturgical year calendar of the Church of the East is divided as in the following table:

Chants and Homilies Themes

The Church of the East poets and composers wrote in all the biblical subjects in prose and in verse, such as the stories of the creation of the world, Adam and Eve. They also depicted the Angels in their poems, such as the verse homily composed by Mar Narsai (Haw D-nūrāne) (ܐܘܪܐܢܐ ܕܢܘܪܐܢܐ).⁵ This poem is about the Seraphim and the Cherubim Angels. This specific chant is one of the chants that is practiced by both Eastern and Western rites.⁶ Paradise was also a big inspiration to the poets, especially in Saint Ephrem's writings. As we read in the Response of Hymn VI: "Blessed is He who through His Cross has flung open Paradise," and in Hymn XI: "Blessed is He who exalted Adam and caused him to return to Paradise."⁷ Church writers also set the words on the conception of the birth of the Christ in the flesh by the Virgin Mary, such as the text in the Response of Hymn VIII by St. Ephrem, which is one of twenty-eight surviving hymns on nativity: "Glory to your divine and human manifestation."⁸ Many chants are on the Epiphany of Christ and the Holy Baptism. A large amount of the text of the chants were also about hymns on faith against heretics.

The entrance into Jerusalem, the Passover, the Passion, and the Holy Mysteries were rich material that comprised significantly in their poetry. In addition, many chants were written on the Crucifixion, the Resurrection, and the Ascension of the Christ. Moreover, the poets composed chants about the sanctification of the Holy Church of Christ. Such as Mar Narsai's memrā verse Ascetic and monastic topics were also among the early church poets such as Aphrahat, who lived in the beginning of the 4th century.¹⁰ Syriac poets and theologians used biblical stories, parables, and characters that are essential in Christian faith. These include many themes; nevertheless, most of the poets included the following themes in their memrē, madrāshe, soghyāthā, or other types of hymns.

Tishmishta D-Şlutha is held twice a day in the morning called Tishmishta D- şlutha D-şapra and in the evening called Tishmishta D- şlutha D-ramsha. This practice of chanting Onyatha D-sahde daily except for Sundays and feasts days is considered unique among other church traditions, and the continuity of practicing such theme until the present time has important reasons behind it.

Hundreds of assaults and systematic religious and ethnic cleansing attempts were recorded in the historical and religious documents of the Church of the East in Mesopotamia. The persecutions occurred in Mesopotamia against Christian Assyrians and Christians of other ethnicities, who were all members of the Church of the East in the first centuries. These persecutions are divulged by the survived written evidence by historians, monks, and poets, who hid many of those documents and books inside the churches and monasteries. Persecutions and violations were a continued theme in the Church history throughout the centuries. Therefore, Martyrdom became a constant topic for all poets and theologians. Singing Onyatha D-sahde became part of everyday church practice to commemorate the martyrs and also to set them as an example for the church believers, to follow their steps in keeping their faith.

The attacks against the Christians began from the first centuries, first by the Romans followed by Sasanians and Persians to the Arabs and Islamic invasions. Sadly, Christians of Mesopotamia of all denominations in Iraq and Syria and in the regions that are bordered by Turkey and Iran have witnessed all types of persecutions, massacres, and genocides. The 20th century genocides specifically (1915) known as Sword “Seypa” or “Seyfo” (سيف) committed by the Ottomans targeted Armenians, Assyrians, and Greeks, was the worst in the history of Mesopotamia.¹¹

Joseph Yacoub in “Year of the Sword” states that many poems and laments such as (dourektha) ܕܘܪܝܩܬܐ which is secular song type was composed after the genocides. These songs have sad tunes that tell the stories of the martyrs, who died during the massacres. The songs were composed by eye witnessed survivors, which also sung by their decedents. Dourektha was practiced in both Eastern and Western Syriac church communities.¹² Like the liturgical chants, these Laments and poems were passed down orally and recited by the next generations. The laments of 1915 were named (dourekta d-firman) which means the Lament of the Massacre.¹³

Not many years passed until other massacres were committed against the Assyrians, which took place in northern Iraq in Simele, this time the massacres were committed by the Iraqi government. Simele Massacres in 1933, took place in the village of Simele and other Assyrian villages in Beth Nuhadra. The Assyrians worldwide observe August 7th of each year to recognize and commemorate the martyrs of all genocides. This date is considered as the Assyrian Martyr’s Day.

This explains why our Assyrian families and our grandfathers named their sons sahda ܣܗܕܐ (lit. Martyr), which is transcribed in Arabic and in English to Sada. Our grandparents experienced the 20th century massacres, these disasters impacted them and the next generation of our parents' social, cultural, and economic life.

¹¹ The Assyrian genocide lasted from January 1915 to July 1918, which took place in eastern Anatolia, in Persia and in the province of Mosul in Nineveh. See, Joseph Yacoub and James Ferguson, Year of The Sword: The Assyrian Christian Genocide, A History (Oxford University Press, 2016), 13.

¹³ Joseph Yacoub and James Ferguson, Year of The Sword: The Assyrian Christian Genocide, A History (Oxford University Press, 2016), 170.

Sadly, third and fourth generation of the twentieth century genocides are still experiencing such attempts. Hundreds of randomly and targeted attacks were committed against innocent Christians in Iraq. Some were committed by intimidating and torturing the clergy, others by looting and burning religious properties and brutally killing the Christians even while praying inside their churches. In the recent years, one of the tragic massacres committed by Islamic State ISIS in 2010 was inside the Syriac Catholic Church in Baghdad during the Sunday evening Mass, while usually the Church is full of worshippers.¹⁴ Therefore, as consequences of all these tragedies, one can comprehend the reasons behind specific church themes and practices such as martyrdom and Antiphons of the martyrs to become part of the Church liturgy.

The Writing Style and Genres

Syriac literature is full of sacred poems written in prose and in verse that were produced by Poets and theologians in Beth Nahrain. The writers used different writing styles, some used a direct speech style that appears in the voice of the narrator or a dialogue, and others described specific events in various chant genres. These different types of chants and hymns were included within the church offices as well as in the liturgical and other sacred purposes of the church hymnody. Five genres are part of the main church hymnody. Some hymn poems are stanzaic

¹⁴ In the last fifteen years in Iraq, many churches of all denominations have been targeted, burned, and some were demolished, especially in Nineveh and other northern cities of Iraq. The 2010 church massacre in Baghdad was one of the most tragic attacks by the Islamic State (ISIS) on the Syriac Catholic Church in Baghdad during the Sunday evening Mass. Fifty-eight people were killed, some beheaded on the altar. Among the martyrs were the two church priests Father Thair and Father Wasim, in addition to seventy-eight wounded. such as the soghyāthā ܫܘܓܝܐܬܗ (sing. soghithā ܫܘܓܝܐܬܗ), madrāše ܡܕܪܐܫܐ (sing. Madrāšā ܡܕܪܐܫܐ),¹⁵
‘Onyātha ܘܢܝܬܗ (sing. ‘onytha ܘܢܝܬܗ),¹⁶ Tešbḥatha ܬܝܫܒܗܬܗ (sing. tešbuḥta ܬܝܫܒܗܬܗ).

‘Onyātha and tešbḥatha are usually short hymns, some have isosyllabic meters, and others have irregular syllabic meters. Soghyāthā are considered one of the main and unique styles of the stanzaic chants usually with long number of verses. They are also known as dispute poems or the Syriac dialogue poems.¹⁷ This style of writing was not a new one in the region; in fact, this genre was a well-known poetic style used 2000 BC by the ancestors in the same land of Beth Nahrain. The writing style of Disputation between two or more characters of the story was first used by the Sumerians and later by the Babylonians and Assyrians.¹⁸

Another distinctive style, which is present in the metrical or verse homilies memrē ܡܡܪܐܝܐ (sing. memrā ܡܡܪܐܝܐ).¹⁹ These are long poems comprised of isosyllabic lines that included equal syllables length or meters, this type of homilies dominated over the prose one. Examples of memrē meters are 5+5, 7+7, or 12+12 (syllables per line). Each composer was known for his preferred meter. For instance, 7+7 meter was known as Apramaya, means Ephremic and 12+12 as Narsaya that belongs to Mar Narsai. Other liturgical chants, which some include verses of the psalms are also practiced during Raza and ordinary days such as: Qalta, Hulala, Shubakha, Qanuna, Hpakhta, and Basaliqe.

1. Soghithā هفجبة

Soghithā هفجبة is one of the stanzaic poem's genres. It is also one of the main hymn genres in the Syriac hymnody tradition. In his book Sogiatha, Brock provides English translation of four of the following dialogue or dispute soghyāthā hymns that feature biblical stories: Zechariah and the Angel, The Angel and Mary, John the Baptist and Our Lord, and The Cherub and the Thief.²⁰

However, other dispute soghyāthā are also found in the Syriac literature that describe the relationship between Christianity and Judaism. In this theme, four survived soghyāthā are also introduced by Brock with English translation. The titles of these soghyāthā are; Synagogue and Church, Sion and Church, Synagogue and Our Lord, and Pharisees and Our Lord. Although, most of these dispute soghyāthā are by anonymous, but most of them date from the fifth and sixth centuries.²¹

Soghithā usually consists of many verses, which mainly are dispute poems that have a biblical story and characters often between two, or more characters, many times with alphabetic acrostic.²² Some of the dispute poems introduce double alphabetic acrostic, which usually take place in the dialogue section between the characters, therefore each letter of the alphabeti acrostic will be presented twice.²³

Other types of soghyāthā, are poetic verses (no dialogue) with a refrain that sometimes are written in alphabetic acrostic as well. In Some soghyāthā we find the acrostic style is also written to comprise a phrase, or a name, such as Mar Aprem hymn that each verse begins with a letter of (Jesus Christ) in Syriac (Ishu Mshikha).

In the dispute poems, which is the main type in soghyāthā, the characters usually alternated between the verses bateh ܒܬܗܝܠܗ. Brock believes that St. Ephrem was the earliest known Christian poet to use the dispute poem style in his hymns. Most of the survived dispute poems which are anonymous were written between the fourth and sixth centuries. As explained in chapter two, the dispute poems were best known poetic writing style in Beth Nahrain during ancient times.²⁴ The verses consist of two isosyllabic syllable meters. Some soghyāthā are more than fifty verses long. Two examples from the liturgical books are given in chapter five.

The equal syllabic meter of the soghyāthā makes the melodies repetitive and easy to sing by the choir and congregation. Syllabic meters could consist of two isosyllabic lines, each has a regular meter of 7+7.²⁵ As explained in chapter two, the dispute poems are structured in three parts. The introduction when a narrator introduces the characters, the second part includes the dialogue or the argument between the characters. Finally, the last part includes the end of the dispute with concluding thoughts, usually by the narrator or the witness of the story.

2. Madrāšā ܡܕܪܳܫܳܐ

Madrāsha is a doctrinal hymn that consists of an important theological idea such as the salvation. Madrāsha is considered another significant stanzaic poem genre in the Syriac literature, which is composed by different poets. Many madrāshe have been attributed to Mar Aprem; however, some might be written by later poets.²⁶ Madrāshe have a refrain, or a response called ʿunāya in the beginning that is repeated after each verse. Madrāshe are composed in regular or irregular meters. Madrāshe are composed in simple as well as in complex syllabic meters.²⁷ The ʿunāya in the madrāsha can have either the exact meter of the verses Bātē such as (5+5/ 5+5).²⁸ In other madrāshe the ʿunāya may have a different meter or sometimes imitates the meter of the last line of the verse such as the madrāsha Glory to That Child, the meter of the ʿunāya is 5+5+5+3, while the meter of the entire verse is:

14 (7+7) +14 (7+7) +16 (8+8): 5+5+5+3.²⁹

The verses of the Madrāsha are performed by a female or a male soloist and the ʿunāya is sung by the choir after each verse. However, the soloist will sing the ʿunāya alone in the beginning of each madrāsha. Mar Aprem emphasized that the madrāshe are preferred to be performed by females. A detailed explanation with Syriac and English translation text is provided in Women’s Choirs section in this chapter. Madrāshe can have a variety of numbers of stanzas, most survived madrāshe have three to eight stanzas. However, in the in the main liturgical book of Ḥudra, only three verses are listed, whereas more verses are in the manuscripts or other Syriac liturgical books.

Mar Aprem alone has written more than 400 madrāshe. Some of these madrāshe are included in the liturgical books, others are in collections in separate manuscripts. The tunes of the madrāshe are listed in the beginning of each madrāsha according to the fixed melody guide qāla. More will be explained on qāle in the Chant Melodies section in this chapter. The melody of the madrāsha is easier when it contains a regular poetic meter. Madrāshe also have a lot of space for improvisation by the soloist, therefore the same madrāsha might be heard with different endings. Madrāshe have usually slow tempo and mostly composed with sad tunes.

3. `Onithā, ܐܘܢܝܬܐ

`Onitha is poetic genre that comes in multiple ways. It can appear in the liturgy as a dependent or independent chant. Therefore, `onitha might work as an antiphonal response to psalm verses, such as the `onitha “Praise God in His Sanctuary.... Hallelujah.”³⁰ `Onitha could be also an individual short hymn to be performed before or after the readings of the Bible. The structure of the `onitha could be a through composed or consist of isosyllabic short lines. The subjects of the `onyātha are either praise hymns or related to the themes of the liturgical feasts of the church.³¹

`Onyātha are also written to commemorate the saints or the martyrs such as the Antiphons of the Martyrs `Onyatha D-sahde.³² In the present time, the church sometimes combines more than one `onitha of the same theme, which are listed on the same page in the liturgical book to look as one independent soghitha. An example of this is the anthem “Blessed are the Children”, this anthem is also included in chapter five, number 6, which is from the book of Hudra.³³ This Anthem is on Palm Sunday and is performed mainly by the children of the church, usually with procession outside the church.

Therefore, the hymn looks like it is consisted of six verses, but originally each verse is a responsorial `onitha that is to be chanted after each shuraya (lit. beginning). Shuraya is a poetic section consists of nonmetric phrases written to proceed each `onitha. Shuraya is chanted by a soloist in a recitative style probably by a deacon Mshamshana.³⁴ ‘Onyātha are mostly short and have a moderate tempo.

4. Tešbuḥta ܛܫܒܘܚܬܐ

Tešbḥatha are songs of praise and joy. These hymns are sung by the congregation and performed by the choir as well. Tešbḥatha are metrical and stanzaic. This genre was also one of the previously existed genres in Mesopotamia before Christianity. The genre appears in Akkadian language to praise the goddess Ishtar and other deities. The liturgy of the Church of the East includes a collection of tešbḥatha composed by different poets. In this study, I have given four examples of tešbḥatha that are widely performed at the church.³⁵ Tešbḥatha usually have light tunes and faster tempo than all other genres. Brock has provided an English translation of fifteen tešbḥatha from the Church of the East liturgy.³⁶

³³ Hudra II, p.460 (444 ܘܘܕܘܕ).

³⁴ Shuraya is a poetic section of nonmetric phrases precedes the `onitha. Shuraya is chanted by a soloist in a recitative style by a deacon.

Tešbħatha are in two isosyllabic meters. Most tešbħatha are in 4+4 / 4+4 such as the first example in chapter four “Blessed is the Compassionate One”, by Mar Baḅai Rabba (Babai the Great). Some in 5+5/5+5 such as Blessed Be the One.³⁷ Although tešbħatha are usually hymns of praise; however, some have a theologian teaching within the theme of praise. Some tešbħatha are also composed in alphabetic acrostic or the letters or the acrostic spells the name of Jesus Christ Ishu Mshikha, such as in the tešbħatha Nuhra Dnakh by Mar Aprem.

5. Memrā ܡܡܪܐ

Memrā means a Homily. Homilies are commentary or exegesis that usually follow the readings of biblical verses or a passage from the scripture to address a theological topic. These sermons are known to be written in prose in the Western Christianity. However, in addition to the prose methodology, in the Syriac Christian tradition, homilies or memrē were creatively written in isosyllabic couplets, which are known as verse or metrical homilies. These poetic memrē are chanted to specific melodies called qale, which mentioned earlier as fixed tunes that have titles of the first words of a well-known chant, these qale could be sung to any hymn with similar syllabic pattern. This creative form of writing Memrē was not only important as an aesthetic style, but it also helped the worshipers to memorize these sermons by singing them. Memrē are chanted during the main liturgical hours of Raze on Sundays as well as other days of the week. As stated by Brock “memrā, was suited for narrative or moralizing verse, and was the vehicle for the distinctively Syriac genre of verse homily.”³⁸

³⁷ Tešbuħta number 9 in chapter four.

³⁸ Sebastian P. Brock. An Introduction to Syriac Studies. Third edition. Gorgias Handbooks. Piscataway, NJ: Gorgias Press, 2017, 10.

Mar Aprem, Mar Narsai, and Mar Jacob of Serugh, were the earliest poets to write the metrical memrē. Many of the syllabic patterns of memrē consisted of (7+7) or (12+12).

Mar Narsai (d. ca. 500) wrote many Memrē of which 81 survived written in couplets, most of them have 12 syllable patterns (hegyānā) ܗܝܓܝܢܐ per line, while others have 7 syllables per line. Some of the survived original manuscripts by Syriac authors such as Mar Ephrem, Mar Narsai and many others have been digitized in a text format by the “Digital Syriac Corpus,” which an open-access online project founded by Dr. Kristian S. Heal, Brigham Young University and Prof. David G.K. Taylor, University of Oxford in 2004.³⁹ These digital files including homilies and hymns are made available online, which allow the researchers to easily access hundreds of Syriac valuable and variety of works.

Chant Melodies

The Syriac chant melodies were transmitted aurally/orally, no evidence of any physical notation of the melodies have been discovered to date. The old books of the liturgy show that the composers used fixed tunes Qale as a guidance tune of the chants.⁴⁰ Each tune was named after the beginning text of one specific known chant. That tune could be used with any other chant of the same syllabic meter.⁴¹ Although there is no evidence of any notation, we do have some evidence in some manuscripts that show the Syriac writers used some type of signs as a guidance written over the chants text for the performance practices of the chants.

³⁹ Digital Syriac Corpus is now a collaboration of University of Oxford, Brigham Young University, Vanderbilt University, and the Center of Digital Humanities Research (CoDHR) at Texas A&M University.

⁴⁰ Qala, plural Qale, are fixed melodies to be used with many different chants of the same number of syllables. Each qala is named after the first words of the original chant. Before each chant, there is an instruction of which qala to be used to perform the chant.

⁴¹ Bates, “Songs and Prayers Like Incense.”185.

The East Rite tradition uses monophonic chanting style only. The main melodies used with chants are based on the qale. All the chants and hymns are in the liturgical books of the Church, such as Hudra, Gazza, Kashkul and Turgama. The name of the qala is taken from the first two or three words of the chant. If the chant has the original name of the qala is called Resh Qala رَشْ قَالَا (leading tune). Thus, Qale serve as melodic guidance for other chants or hymns. For instance: a Resh Qala named “Itlan Sabra” on P. 213 in the book of Turgama is used in many other chants such as the soghitha of the birth of Jesus on P. 120 in the book of Turgāmē titled “Byaldeh dawra nuhra dnakh” by Mar Narsai. 7+7/ 7+7 syllabic meter.

The modes used in chanting the in the church of the east liturgy have a combination of whole, half and quarter tones. Therefore, when transcribing half-flat and half- sharp sings must be included if the melody is in the oriental Maqam. Although the Maqams were used in the church for centuries, their names are in either Arabic, Turkish, or Persian words. Most of the main Maqam names were agreed on during the first music symposium held in Cairo in 1932. Musicians and musicologists from many countries from the East and the West attended this conference, including Bela Barton and Paul Hindemith.

Women's Choirs

Singing chants and responses during Mass or ordinary days was and still in many traditions performed by all adult men and young boys.⁴² Although the choral and polyphony music was highly developed in the sixteenth century in the west, the Roman Catholic Church did not allow women to sing in the church. "The upper parts of the polyphonic settings were sung by boys with unchanged voices, adult male falsettists, or castrati."⁴³

In 1773, women were allowed for the first time to sing in the performance in "Judith" the oratorio by Thomas Arne, after many years of performance without women's voices. However, this was not a church performance, instead it was performed at Covent Garden Theater in London.⁴⁴ During Bach time in Leipzig, women did not perform in church choirs until 1940.⁴⁵ It was not until the nineteenth century that women were participating with men in choral settings outside the church. By contrast, we find in the early Church of the East, two committed church group members known as Son of the Covenant Bnay Qyāmā בְּנֵי קְיָאמָא and Daughters of the Covenant Bnāt Qyāmā בְּנָתֵי קְיָאמָא had the responsibility of performing the liturgical chants as well as other types of hymns during the church services and at funerals.⁴⁶

Rabbula's Canons of the fourth century show the responsibilities of each group of Sons and Daughters of the Covenant.⁴⁷ These groups existed in the pre-monastic Syriac tradition. The two groups had many church responsibilities, especially singing the liturgical hymns at church and in other church events. In addition to “the task of singing psalms and various kinds of hymns in certain liturgical celebrations of the civic churches.”⁴⁸ Daughters of the covenant were required to sing the doctrinal hymns madrāshe according to Rabbula Canons.⁴⁹ Moreover, they were also requested to participate in singing during the daily offices with Bnay Qyama and other clergies.⁵⁰

Most of the church laws forbade women’s singing in the church according to the gospel verse by Apostle Paul on women’s silence inside the church.⁵¹ On the other hand, we see Mar Aprem in the fourth century shows a profound respect for women and encouraged their roles in the Christian community. Mar Aprem showed his appreciation for women by including different subjects and topics on women in his writings, especially in his memrē and madrāshe on Nativity, Virginity, or on the Church, especially on his comparison between Mary and Eve such as his words in his madrāsha on Church number 49, line 7.

“Just as it was by the small cavity of Eve’s ear that death entered and was poured out, so too it was a new ear, that of Mary, that life entered and was poured out.”⁵²

Mar Jacob of Serugh’s homily written on Mar Aprem, shows how Mar Aprem played an essential role in founding the women’s choirs. Mar Aprem also called them teachers Malpanyatha ܡܠܦܢܝܬܐ. The memrā also show how much Mar Aprem encouraged the women to praise and sing, because they were created equal to men. Furthermore, women’s choirs responsibilities were not limited to singing and worshipping, but they had Gospel teaching opportunity among their communities.⁵³ Mar Aprem believed that women should not be silenced out, in fact, he believed that women should sing in the church reminding them of Moses when gave timbrels to the young girls.⁵⁴ The text of the memrā comprises of 184 isosyllabic couplets of 12+12 meter. 40. Our sisters also were strengthened by you to give praise; for women were not allowed to speak in church.

41. Your instruction opened the closed mouths of the daughters of Eve: and behold, the gatherings of the glorious (church) resound with their melodies.
42. A new sight of women uttering the proclamation; and behold, they are called teachers among the congregations.
43. Your teaching signifies an entirely new world; for yonder in the kingdom, men and women are equal.
44. You labored to devise two harps for two groups; you treated men and women as one to give praise.

There is always a question or a concern regarding the melodies of the hymns, whether the poets wrote the text and composed the Melodies at the same time. The answer is that we cannot confirm that every single hymn was written, for instance by Mar Aprem, the melody was also composed by him. However, there is some interesting information and surviving evidence that we have so far from the Syriac Vita of Mar Aprem informs us that Mar Aprem not only established the women’s choirs, but also arranged, composed, demonstrated, and taught the melodies to daughters of the covenant Bnāt Qyāmā. In fact, in today’s language Mar Aprem was ⁵⁹ Ibid, 52-53.

a poet, a composer, an arranger, a voice instructor, and a choral conductor. Mar Aprem had to deal with the rejection of women's participation in church singing, which might have been normal practice at that time. Mar Aprem lived in a time where the culture was comprised of both Christian and pagan communities. We read in the Vita about the relationship between Mar Aprem and Bnāt Qyāmā:

Like a father, stood among them, as harpist of the Spirit, arranging various songs for them, demonstrating and teaching a variety of songs until the entire city gathered round him. And he shamed the opposition and did away with them.

There is no doubt that the culture in the fourth century would significantly reject the idea of women's choir participation next to the men's choir during the church services. Nevertheless, Mar Aprem who died in 373 AD was able to gain people's trust and acceptance for such types of activities. More importantly, Mar Aprem challenged the social norms of the 4th-century society by emphasizing the importance of the choir singing in the church, and gospel teaching role among their communities. The singing of women's choirs continued to be practiced within the Church of the East to date, despite that such activity was unacceptable and still in the twenty-first century not preferable in other church Traditions.

Tišbuḥta: Brikh Khannana (D-Subara)
Blessed is the Compassionate One

This Tišbuḥta is a praise hymn composed by Mar Bawai Rabba-Babai the Great (ca.551-628) in the 6th century. This Tišbuḥta is considered one of the most important sources in the Church of the East liturgy, because it clearly expresses the theology of Christology of the Church. Although, it is a praise hymn, but Mar Bawai made it a doctrinal hymn too. The text begins from Isaiah’s prophecy on Jesus, next he defines and explains the theology and the Christology of the Church of the East within the twenty stanzas of the Tišbuḥta. Mar Bawai clearly defines the duality of *Qnoma*¹ ܩܢܘܡܐ and the unity in one person of Christ.

He also emphasized the trinity by the repeat text note after stanza 18 (repeat three times) and ends the Tišbuḥta in the last stanza with the text “One is the glory of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit forever and ever, Amen and Amen.” emphasizing the oneness of God in three Qnomē ܩܢܘܡܐ.

Each Tišbuḥta has its own tune qāla. However, the tune provided in this document is recorded according to the performance practice of the Assyrian Churches in Iraq, later, all over the diaspora until this day. Some sister churches sing the same hymn with different qālē or Maqams.² This Tišbuḥta is assigned in the book of Ḥudra for the season of Annunciation or Advent (ܩܢܘܡܐ Subara) and Nativity (ܩܢܘܡܐ Yalda) liturgical seasons of the Church calendar.³

² Chaldean Catholic Church practices the same liturgy.

³ Also, Khudra, the main liturgical book of the Church of the East. Ḥudra I, p.134 (118 ܩܢܘܡܐ).

This hymn was included in several manuscripts, which are kept in Iraq, Paris, Berlin, London, and the Vatican.⁴ The Tišbuhta has twenty stanzas, all in a regular meter. Each stanza has two lines, each consisting of eight syllables. The meter of the hymn is in 8+8 syllables. The qala of this Tišbuhta is in the Maqam of Saba, this Maqam is one of the most used Maqams among the oriental musical Maqams, especially in Iraq. This Maqam can be found in church hymns, classic and folk love songs, or any other religious music due to its association with feelings of sadness. The melody of this tune is consisting of four pitches (D, E half-flat, F, G) with a close motion relation between the intervals. The melody mostly moves by a step or a skip to the third, with no leaps. The Tišbuhta genre has a strophic verse structure. It is assigned to be chanted during the Raza Qadisha (Holly Mass) by the choir and the congregation.

Advent (D-Subara)
Teshbokhta: Brikh Khannana
ܕܘܚܘܚܕܐ : ܐܝܬܘܫܘܫܐ ܕܒܪܝܥܝܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ
Blessed is the compassionate One

Blessed is the Compassionate One who in His grace has provided our life with prophecy.
With the eye of the spirit did Isaiah see the wondrous Child of virginity without intercourse did Mary give birth to Emmanuel, the Son of God.
For from her the Holy Spirit fashioned His body that was united (with Him), as it is written to be an abode and temple that is worshipped for the Radiance of the Father in a single Sonship;
and at the very beginning of His wonderful conception, He united it with Himself with a single honour
so that in it He might fulfil all things that belong to it for the common salvation, just as it pleased Him.
On the day of His Annunciation (or Nativity) the Watchers praised Him with their hallelujahs in the height above;
beings on earth, too, offered worship with their gifts in a single (act of) honor:
10
One is Christ, the Son of God, worshipped by all in two natures, 11
for in His divinity He is born from the Father, without beginning, beyond (all) times, 12 and in His humanity, He is born from Mary at the end of times in a body that is united (with Him)
13
His divinity is not from the nature of the mother, and His humanity is not from the nature of the Father:
14
the natures are preserved with their gnome in a single prosopon of the single Sonship.
15
And just as the Divinity is three nome but one Essence, 16
so the Sonship of the Son is, in two natures, a single prosopon.

17
Thus has the holy Church learnt to confess the Son who is Christ.

18

We worship Your divinity, Lord, and Your humanity, without division:

(Repeat verse 18, three times)

19

One is the Power, one is the Lordship, one is the Will,

20

And one is the glory to the Father and Son and Holy Spirit. For eternal ages, Amen and Amen.

The Feast of the Nativity of Christ (`Eda D-Yalda D-Maran)

Madrāsha: Shukha L-haw Yalda

This hymn is the second madrāsha assigned for the Nativity Feast Day in the book of Ḥudra page (596 ܘܘܪܘܟܝܢ). The Ḥudra only includes the refrain `unāya and three verses bāte of the madrāshe. As Brock indicates, this madrāshe appeared in the earlier manuscripts of madrāshe of Mar Aprem.⁵ This madrāshe teaches about the birth of Christ, from his earthly mother and a heavenly father, affirming his divinity as a son of the king. The text also teaches about the birth events that occurred in Bethlehem, and the characters of the manger. The order of this madrāshe in the liturgy as assigned in the Ḥudra comes the second.⁶ Both madrāshe are to be performed after the previous Tišbuḥta “Brikh Khannana” during the vigil shharta. The solo singer (male or female) begins chanting therefrain `Unāya, the choir repeats the `unāya after the soloist.

The soloist only chants the verses Bate followed by the choir chanting the `unāya after each stanza. Although madrāshe could be chanted by both males and a females, we know from the Vita of Mar Aprem, that he trained the women choir to chant several types of hymns including the madrāshe.⁷ The role of women chanting the madrāshe was also mentioned in one of Mar Aprem’s Easter hymns where he lists the responsibility of each group in the church: “The deacons their lections, the young men their alleluias, the boys their psalms, the virgins their madrāshe".⁸ However, the current performance practice of the madrāshe in the Assyrian churches is not limited to women's soloists.

The madrāshe has `unāya and bāte, but only three stanzas are included in the Ḥudra. This madrāsha falls under the complex or compound syllabic meters and has irregular syllabic meter. The `unāya is in 5+5+5+3. The verses bāte are in 14 (7+7) +14 (7+7) +16 (8+8) : 5+5+5+3. The `unāya has the same meter as the last section. Although this meter is repeated throughout the verses, this uneven meter between the lines makes the tune sound more like a through composed hymn than a strophic. This meter appears in many other hymns. There are two qāle mentioned in the Ḥodra to follow in singing this madrāsha. The first one is B-zil laqritha, the second one is L-arba`pinyan.⁹ The qāla L-arba`pinyan is the one used in this study. This qāla is widely used throughout the liturgy with many chants of the same syllabic meters. The qāla of this madrāsha is in the Maqam of Saba.

Soghitha: Ri`yan Shaqlan
John the Baptist and Our Lord

This soghithā is one of the long soghyāthā of the dialogue or dispute poems found in the manuscripts that include both mēmre and soghyāthā of Mar Narsai.¹⁰ It is titled by John the Baptist and Our Lord ܘܗܘܝܘܢܐ ܕܘܪܝܢܐ ܕܡܪܝܢܐ. This hymn is included in the Book of Turgāmē page 133; however, not all the verses are included. In this soghithā, we see the narrator, who witnessed the baptism begins the hymn by picturing the event and the place in Jordan for six stanzas. Then John the Baptist begins in verse seven talking directly to the Lord. We also see the narrator comes for a short time in verse eight “our Lord spoke” Then Jesus takes it from there for a long dialogue (50) with John in alternation. The dialogue ends in verse 47 when John replies “I will obey, Lord, and do as You say, come then to baptism...”, the narrator once more appear in verse 48-50 and ends this soghithā with his astonishing sight as an eyewitness to a baptism of Christ in the Jordan river with words of praise “thanks be to Your Epiphany, O Lord who give joy to all...” In the Turgāmē, the last three verses of the narrator are indicated as the church ܘܗܘܝܘܢܐ, meaning the believers who witnessed the holy baptism.¹¹

The stanzas of this soghithā are ordered in alphabetic acrostic. This order begins in verse (7) when the dialogue starts between John and Jesus beginning with the first letter ālap (ܐ - a) in Syriac up to tāw (ܬ - t) the last letter of the alphabet. Both characters in the dialogue have their responses in the alphabetic acrostic order of the Assyrian language.¹² Each letter is repeated

¹⁰ This soghithā is also attributed to Mar Aprem in other sources.

¹¹ In the Printed edition of the Book of Turgāmē, Baghdad, Iraq 1968:134-135.

¹² The alphabet order of the Assyrian/ Aramaic language consists of twenty-two consonant letters. See page 12, Yildiz, Efrem. 2020. Grammar of Modern Assyrian Language. Akkad book.

twice, first by John and second by Jesus until the end of the dialogue. The narrator or (church) ends the last three verses with šin (ܫ - sh) and tāw (ܬ - t).

This soghīthā is assigned in the Book of Turgāmē for the Feast of the Epiphany, usually it is chanted by the choir during the time of the Holy Communion qurbānā ܩܘܪܒܢܐ (lit. offering or sacrifice). All the members of the choir chant this soghīthā together. The congregation can also join the choir in chanting. Although this soghīthā has 50 stanzas, only 12 are printed in the Book of Turgāmē. However, I found it essential to provide the whole stanzas of the soghīthā. The text is available in many manuscripts and in printed editions too.¹³

The soghīthā has fifty stanzas, all in a regular meter. Each stanza has two isosyllabic couplets, each couplet has 7+7 syllables. The manuscripts don't show the qala of this soghīthā; however, in the book of Turgāmē gives instruction to chant this soghīthā in the same previous tune beh bqāla, ܒܩܐܠܐ , which is Itlan Sabra (lit. We have hope).¹⁴ The qala is in the Maqam of Bayati.

The Feast of the Epiphany (`Eda D-Dinkha)

John the Baptist and Our Lord

Tune (Qāla) : In the tune of: Ilan Sawra

Verses (Bātē):

My imagination wafted me to Jordan where I beheld a wonder when the glorious Bridegroom was revealed to make a marriage feast for the Bride and to sanctify her.

I saw John, filled with astonishment with crowds standing round him while the glorious Bridegroom bent down before the child of barren parents to be baptized.

My mind was amazed at both Word and Voice: John was the Voice, our Lord, who shone forth, was like the word ready to come out into the open, having been hidden.

The Bride was betrothed, but she knew not who was the Groom she was to expect. The wilderness was filled with the wedding guests assembled, and hidden among them there was our Lord.

It was then that the Groom revealed Himself, coming to John by the river, the herald trembled as he announced, Here is the Groom whom I have been proclaiming.

There came to baptism He who baptizes all, manifesting Himself by the Jordan. John beheld Him and withdrew his hand, using supplement words, as follows:

John

A: How is it, Lord, that You should be baptized, for at your baptism You bring forgiveness to all. The Font looks expectantly towards you; sprinkle in it sanctification and it will be perfected.

Jesus

A: Our Lord spoke: I have willed it approach and baptize me, that my will be done. Resist my will you cannot; shall be baptized by you for thus have willed.

John

B: I beg you, Lord, let me not be compelled: what You ask is hard; it is I who need to be baptized by you, for you with Your hyssop, make all things white.

10

Jesus

B: I have asked, for it has pleased me that it should be so; why then, John, do you dispute it? Let what right demands to fulfilled; come, baptize me; why do you stand there?

11

John

G: How can mere straw which is like tinder grasp fire in its hands? O Being of fire, have pity on me let me not come near, it is so hard for me.

12

Jesus

G: I have revealed to you from the start my will; draw near and baptize me, you will not get burnt. The bridal chamber is ready, do not hold me back from the wedding feast that lies prepared.

13

John

D: The angels are afraid and do not dare to gaze upon You, for fear of being blinded: how then can I, Lord, baptize You? I am too weak to draw near: please do not reproach me.

14

Jesus:

D: You should be afraid of disputing my will, going against what I have asked. Baptism awaits me expectantly: fulfill the task to which you were called.

John

H: I proclaimed you by the Jordan in the hearing of the people who are not easily persuaded; if now they see You baptized by me they will doubt that you are the Lord.

16

Jesus

H: I will be baptized while they look on, for the Father who sent me will testify that I am His Son in whom He is well pleased. He will bring reconciliation to Adam who had earned His wrath.

17

John

W: It is proper, Lord, that I should recognize my true nature, seeing that I am fashioned out of earth, where as You are the fashioner, who gives shape to How can I baptize You in the water?

18

Jesus

W: It is proper you should know why I have come and for what reason I have requested you to baptize me: this is the middle point of the path I have trod; let baptism not be withheld.

19

John

Z: The river You have come to is too small for You to stop there and it contain You: heaven cannot suffice for Your might, so how can the water of baptism hold You ?

20

Jesus

Z: The womb is yet smaller than the Jordan, yet of my own will I dwelt in the Virgin. Just as I was born from the womb, so shall I be baptized in the Jordan.

21

John

H: The heavenly armies stand by, serried ranks of angels, in worship: if I should approach to baptize You, I shall tremble with fright.

22

Jesus

: These crowds of heavenly powers consider you blessed for baptizing me. It for this I chose you from the womb: have no fear, for I have willed it.

23

John

T: I have prepared the way for which I was sent, I have betrothed the Bride as I was hidden. Let Your Epiphany increase in the world now that You are come; but I will not baptize You.

24

Jesus

T: This is the very preparation I have wished for that I should go down and be baptized in the water, forging armor for those to be baptized, that they may look upon me and not be vanquished.

25

John

Y: Why should I baptize the Child of the Father, seeing that You are in Your Father and He in You. You give sanctification to priests, so why are You asking for ordinary water?

26

Jesus

Y: The children of Adam are looking to me to give them new birth: I shall tread out in the waters a path for them, and, unless I am baptized, this cannot be done.

27

John

K: Pontiffs are sanctified by You, by Your hyssop priests are whitened; You make anointed kings, so how can baptism benefit You?

28

Jesus

K: The Bride whom you betrothed to me is expecting me to go down to baptism, and then I shall sanctify her. O friend of the Bridegroom, please do not refuse this washing which awaits me.

29

John

L: I cannot, for I am too weak, hold in my hands Your flame. Your legions are made of fire: tell one of the angels to give baptism to You.

30

Jesus

L: It is not from the angels that my body was taken, otherwise I might have called an angel to baptize me. No, it is Adam's body with which I am clothed, and you, a child of Adam, shall baptize me.

31

John

M: The waters saw You and greatly feared, the waters have seen You and are trembling, the very river shook with fright, why should I, so frail, give You baptism?

32

Jesus

M: The waters will be sanctified at my baptism fire and spirit will they receive from me; unless I am baptized they will not fulfill their proper role of bearing as fruit immortal offspring.

33

John

N: If fire should approach Your Fire it will get burnt up like tinder. Mount Sinai could not endure You, so how can I in my frailty baptize You?

34

Jesus

N: I am indeed burning fire, but for the sake of man I became a child in a novel womb -a virgin's, and now I am to be baptized in the Jordan.

35

John

S: It would be much best if You baptized me, for You possess the sanctification that can purify all: by You are the unclean made holy. why then should You, who are holy, come to baptism?

36

Jesus

S: It would be most appropriate if you gave me baptism, just as I say, without contradicting: I baptized you in the womb, so do you baptize me in the Jordan.

37

John

E: I am but a weak servant, have pity on me, seeing that You give freedom to all. I could not even undo your shoe-straps, whoever is it has made me worthy of Your exalted head?

38

Jesus

E: Servants will receive freedom at my baptism, debts are wiped out when I wash, liberty will receive its seal in the water; but if I am not baptized, it is all in vain.

39

John

P: The very air is carrying a garment of light in readiness for You, above the Jordan; so if it is agreed and You wish to be baptized, baptize Yourself and accomplish all.

40

Jesus

P: It is proper that you should baptize me lest any go astray and say of me "If he is not someone apart, from the Father's house, why is it the Levite is afraid to baptize him?"

41

John

S: How then, as You are being baptized, can I seal prayer by the Jordan, since in You are to be seen both Father and Spirit: whom, then, as a priest, can I invoke?

42

Jesus

S: Prayer can be sealed in silence: just come and place your hand on me. The Father will cry out, in place of a priest, whatever is appropriate concerning His Son.

43

John

Q: All the guests who are standing here, invited by You, the Groom, will bear witness that each day I announced in their midst “I am the voice, and not the Word.”

44

Jesus

Q: O Voice crying in the wilderness, perform the task for which you came so that the wilderness, to which you set out, may taunter at the prosperity you have there proclaimed.

45

John

R: The commotion of angels has reached my ears: from the Father's house I can hear the heavenly powers shout out: at Your Epiphany, o Groom, both worlds have received life.

46

Jesus

R: Time presses and the guests are awaiting me to see what will happen. Come, baptize me, that they may give praise to the voice of the Father when it is heard.

47

John

Š: I will obey, Lord, and do as You say. Come, then, to baptism, since Your love has so urged You: dust gives You worship - to what heights has it come that it should place a hand on its Maker:

48

Š: The serried ranks stood in stillness as the Bridegroom descended into the Jordan; the Holy One was baptized and straightway came up, the light from Him shining out into both worlds.

49

T: The gates of heaven were flung open on high as the Father's voice made itself heard: Here is my beloved, in whom I am pleased; come, all you nations, and worship him.

50

T:In amazement the on lookers stood there as the Spirit came down to witness to Him. Thanks be to Your Epiphany, O Lord who give joy to all, for at Your appearance both worlds are illumined.

Your kindness is a richness for sinners. Your treasures enrich the needy, through you, O Lord, your worshipers become rich: for He is good, His mercies never cease, O Lord, do not neglect my request. ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ ܕܘܨܘܢܐ
ܘܢܘܨܘܢܐ ܕܘܨܘܢܐ

Behold! God’s Free Mercy

Tune (Qāla): In the tune of Ginsa D'mayotha

Refrain (Unāyā):

Behold! God’s free mercy grants forgiveness to genuine fasters: come and receive help.

Verses (Bātē):

My brothers, freely forgives: let us love its assistance, let us rejoice in its medicines. (With) the FASTER (Moses) who came down from Mount Sinai to the encampment of the wicked, holy fasting healed (them) from sicknesses; it has propped up our fallen state, bandaging the dire fractured state of our minds.

Glory to the fasting person (Jesus), who acquits those who fast. Where he made his fast an example for those who fast. Let not our fast be for evil and pleasure, but rather for God. Our fast is for rest. A Fast that is pure and immaculate that enriches the soul. Let us take from His treasures. And we will become rich because of his wealth.

Adam bargained for loss in eating from the Tree, transgressing the Commandment. ...it impoverishes the stomach but fattens up souls. Let us give praise to the First-Born of the Fast who has provided the Fast’s merchandise for our weak state.

The Palm Sunday (Eda D-Osha`neh)
`Onitha: Tuwa L-Yallude
Anthem: Blessed are the Children

This `onitha is chanted on Palm Sunday by the children and young boys and girls assigned in the Ḥudra.¹⁸ The six verses provided in this document are actually six `oniyatha, each is to be chanted after a nonmetric section, which is marked in the Ḥudra as (shuraya) chanted by the young children. After chanting the shuraya, all the children will sing the `onitha then followed by the next shuraya section and the next `onitha until the end. It is in the church tradition, that the children sing these `onyātha while holding olive branches in a procession out of the church. In the recent days, these six `onyātha are combined to look as one hymn and they are sung as a hymn that includes six verses without the shuraya section in between; however, both ways of chanting these `onyātha are still practiced by the church.

Each `onitha or in this case each verse, ends with the same phrase “Hosanna in the Highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord.” This part reappeared in all `oniyatha, therefore it acts like a refrain when singing the `onyātha as verses in one hymn. The six `oniyatha, have a regular meter, each `onitha has three phases each is in: 5+7+7.

All six `onyātha(six verses) are sung to the same qāla (Tuwa L-yallude), which is the title of the first `onitha. The qāla is in the Maqam of Nahawand which is same as the western natural minor scale, the Maqam is usually played on C. The first phrase of melody is repeated, followed by the third phrase.

Blessed are the Children

Tune (Qāla): Rēsh Qāla

1. Blessed be the children who were entitled to see the Christ entering Jerusalem, riding on a donkey, and the children before him were carrying olive branches, praising and saying: Hosanna in the Highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord.
2. The young boys carried the branches and the young girls carried the Kinnors (Lyre) as they sang before Son of David, the spiritual beings heard all the children's cheers, who were crying and saying Hosanna in the Highest! Hosanna to the Son of David, Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.
3. Toddlers, children, and youth, with all ages. For you O Lord they sing a praise. They saw the miracle of your mighty work of restoring Lazarus's life. Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, who by His call brought the dead to life.
4. Children who do not speak yet. Your mighty power shook them and they chanted a (song of) praise in the temple. They reproved the scribes and the teachers of the Law, also the Pharisees who denied your glory. Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna to the Blessed Son of David, who gave the wisdom to the children.
5. Zechariah prophesied and said to the daughter of Zion (Jerusalem): Be glad, and rejoice, Daughter of Jerusalem. Your King is riding upon a colt. And before Him all creation prostrate. Hosanna in the Highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord.
6. Our Lord sent to Bethany (His disciples). And they brought a colt for Him to ride and enter Jerusalem. And the people of Israel were stirred before him. They came out to sing aloud for his Glory. Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna to the Son of David, Blessed be the glory of the Lord.

Holy Thursday (`Eda D-Piskha)
Madrāsha: Tawdi La-Mshikha
Thanks Be to Jesus

This madrāsha is the first out of two madrāshe assigned in the Ḥudra for Holy Thursday Piskha.¹⁹ This madrāshe has three verses, it teaches about Jesus’s salvation through His sacrifice to bring forgiveness and liberation from death. The second verse conveys the same idea that Isaiah writes in his prophesy “He was oppressed and He was afflicted, Yet He did not open His mouth; Like a lamb that is led to slaughter”²⁰ This madrāsha appears to be from the earliest madrāshe.

Although the Ḥudra does not include the name of the composer, it might be one of Mar Aprem’s, since it includes “genuine Ephremic material.”²¹ This madrāsha is included in the West Syriac liturgical books as well.²² Brock emphasizes the importance of the madrāshe included in the liturgical books to restore words, lines, or even whole verses of what is missing or damaged from the early manuscripts. As an example, this madrāsha in the Ḥudra has a third verse that is missing from the Syrian Catholic edition of the Fenqitho liturgical Book (FM VI, p. 374).²³

The unāyā has 5+5/ 5+5. Bātē have a meter of 5+5 / 5+5 / 5+5 +7 / 5+5 / 5+5

The qāla according to the Ḥudra is Browme D'marecol ܒܪܘܡܝܘܢܝܘܬܐ ܕܡܪܥܘܠܐ, this qāla is widely mentioned in the Ḥudra.²⁴ About twelve madrāshe in all three volumes of the Ḥudra are labeled with the same qāla. This qāla chanted in the Maqam of Bayati which is it is usually played in D. The first phrase of melody is repeated, followed by the third phrase.

Tune (Qāla): In the tune of Browme D'marecol

Refrain (Unāyā):

Thanks be to Jesus, who accomplished our salvation, washed with His body the defilement of our sins.

Verses (Bātē):

In the symbol of the Lamb was hidden the symbol of our salvation, and in the blood of animals was marked out the dissolution of our wickedness. And if a silent (animal) brought forgiveness to those endowed with speech, how much more shall the Living Blood sanctify us and wipe out, through His Passion, the bill of our debts, we thereby receiving, through His renewal, liberation from death.

Through the sacrifice of the silent (lamb) was depicted the image of the Living One, and in the slaughter of the dumb (creature) is the resemblance of the Eloquent One whose blood is living blood, giving freedom to creation: it is like a herald in all things of the sacrifice of the Eloquent One who brings forgiveness of debts and clothes mortal beings in garments of forgiveness.

Along the path of the symbol of the lamb did the True Lamb travel, and it arrived at the sacrifice, confirming the image, so as to give liberation of Life to the race of mortal beings, to repay, by means of His death, the debt which his companions had incurred at the transgression of the commandment, showing ingratitude to the Creator with regard to keeping His commandments.

Stay Alert O Watchers!

This madrāsha is the first one out of three madrāshe assigned for Good Friday. This madrāsha is usually performed during the Shharta Vigil, the madrāsha. The Unāyā and the six Bātē, have the same regular meter of 5+5 / 5+5. As all other madrāshe a soloist chants the Unāyā, then the choir repeats it after the soloist and after each verse chanted by the soloist. The qāla is in Maqam Bayati, although this madrāsha has a regular simple syllabic meter, the tune however is challenging. This melody begins on a fourth degree above the root of the Maqam. The root of the Maqam is in D, therefore the starting pitch is G. However, the performer is performing the madrāsha from D. Therefore, it is Bayati on A. The soloist adds additional melodic embellishment while moving from note to note. Usually, it is hard to notate these embellishments because the soloist improvises them in different ways and could change them from verse to verse. However, when the choir sings the Unāyā, even if it has the same melody of the verses, the choir sings the main melody without embellishing the tune.

Great Saturday (Shaptha Rabtha)
Tišbuḥta: Brikh Ithya
Blessed Be the One

This Tišbuḥta is originally assigned to be performed on every Saturday of the year.²⁵ Usually, the hymns of ordinary days are not performed during Feasts. However, this Tišbuḥta is also assigned for the great Saturday, during the Easter Vigil shharta D'qyamta.²⁶ It is mentioned in the Ḥudra that is Tišbuḥta is composed by Qadisha (holy) Mar Aprem. This short Tišbuḥta clearly declares the Trinity of God, as we can see, the theologians, composers, and church leaders emphasized in their hymns, the affirmation of the faith to protect the people from deviating from this teaching to protect them from false teachings and heresies that prevailed in the early centuries especially about the Trinity doctrine.

The Tišbuḥta has three short verses, each verse has a syllabic meter of 10 (5+5) + 10 (5+5). The qāla is known as La-sapqin, لا ساقين ذمنا همدنا which is the title of another Tišbuḥta for Tuesdays.²⁷ This qāla is in the Maqam of Bayati, this short melody uses only four notes of the Maqam including the second note (half-flat). The melody of this Tišbuḥta moves in second, third, and fourth. The half-flat pitch is present in every measure of the melody. The time of this Tišbuḥta is in two and has a moderate tempo.

Easter Vigil (Shahra D-Qyamta)
Soghitha: Bazqiputha Tahra Khzith
The Cherub and the Thief

The soghitha Bazqiputha is one of the well-known Easter soghyāthā in the East and West Syriac traditions.²⁸ This soghitha attributed to Mar Narsai in the East liturgical books and manuscripts, and to Mar Jacob of Serugh Ya`qub Srughaya in the West tradition. Both authors and theologians knew each other and lived at the same time despite the age difference and church affiliations.

The soghitha or this dispute is known as the Cherub and the Thief. It is the story of the wise or the good thief and Jesus on the Cross, the story that occurred in the Bible in books of Matthew, Luke, and Mark.²⁹ The text is provided in the Turgāmēme,³⁰ it is also assigned in the Ḥudra for the Easter vigil with a performance guidance for the deacons and the choirs to sing (in a beautiful way bniša šap-pirā ܒܢܝܫܐ ܫܦܝܪܐ) the upper choir (ܝܟܝܠܝܐ) which is standing in the upper side of the church sings the parts (tar`ē ܬܪܥܝܐ) of the Cherub (kruwā ܟܪܘܘܐ), and the lower choir (ܝܟܝܠܝܐ ܕܡܫܝܚܐ) that stands in the lower section close to the congregation, sings the parts of the thief ܝܟܝܠܝܐ.³¹ This soghitha is usually performed during the Easter vigil during the midnight prayers, which is called shharta D'qyamta; however, we also see it performed on Easter Day. This soghitha is one of the long dispute poems soghyāthā that has the Cherub (ܟܪܘܘܐ) and the Thief (ܝܟܝܠܝܐ Gayyāsa) as the two main characters in the dispute.

²⁹ Mathew 27:38, Luke 23:32, and Mark 15:27.

³⁰ Book of Turgamē p. 167

³¹ Ḥudra II, p.568 (552 ܫܘܚܪܐ)

The hymns begin with a narrator in verse one: At the Crucifixion I beheld a marvel when the Thief cried out to our Lord, “Remember me, Lord, on the day when You come to that Kingdom which does not pass away.” The narrator recalls the dialogue between Jesus and the thief in an imaginary way. In verse six, the narrator recounts: “The word of our Lord was sealed like a royal missive from the palace; it was handed over to the thief who took it and made off for the Garden of Eden.” And in verse seven, the Cherub stops the Thief at the Gate of Eden and starts questioning him. That is when the dialogue begins with in alphabetic acrostic, when the dialogue starts between the cherub and the thief on verse eight. The dispute lasts for fifty-one verses, when the crūwā finally allows the gay-yāsa to enter through the gate to Paradise. A detailed article on this soghitha with biblical references and manuscript information are to be found in “The Dispute Between The Cherub And The Thief.”³²

The verses have two isosyllabic lines, each has a regular meter of 7+7.

The soghitha is chanted with qāla a`šīn `m-mē. This qāla is in Maqam of Bayati, the melody of this soghitha is in 3/4 time. The the melody moves between the six notes of the Maqam in 2nd, 3rd, and 4th interval distance.

The Feast of the Holy Resurrection (`Eda D-Qyamta)
Soghitha: Bazqiputha Tahra Khzith `Al Crowa W-Gayasa

ወይን ለጳውሎስ ጳጳስ ጳውሎስ ጳውሎስ

The Cherub and the Thief

At the Crucifixion I beheld a marvel when the Thief cried out to our Lord, “Remember me, Lord, on the day when You come to that Kingdom which does not pass away.”

He made a petition, stretched out and gave it to the crucified King, asking for mercy; and He who is full of mercy heard his cry and opened the door to his request.

“Remember me, Lord,” was what he cried out on the cross, “in that Kingdom which does not pass away, and in that glory in which You will be revealed may I behold Your rest, seeing that I have acknowledged You.”

Our Lord replied, “Since you have acknowledged me this very day you shall be in the Garden of Eden; in very truth, man, you will not be kept back from that Kingdom to which you are looking.

Take with you the cross as a sign, and be off: it is a great key whereby the mighty gate of that Garden shall be opened, and Adam, who has been expelled, shall enter again.

The word of our Lord was sealed like a royal missive from the palace; it was handed over to the thief who took it and made off for the Garden of Eden.

The Cherub heard him and rushed up, he grabbed the Thief at the gate, stopping him with the sharp blade that he held. All astonished, he addressed him as follows:

Cherub

A: “Tell me, my man, who has sent you? What is it you want, and how did you get here? What is the reason that brought you here? Reveal and explain to me who it is who has sent you.

Thief

A: I will tell you who has sent me, just hold back your blade and listen to my words. I am a thief, but I supplicated for mercy, and it was your Lord who sent me on my way here.

10

Cherub

B: “By what powerful means did your arrival take place? Who brought you to this dread spot? Who transported you across the sea of fire so that you could enter Eden? Who is it who sent you?

11

Thief

B: “It was through the power of the Son, who sent me, that I crossed over and came here without hindrance. Through Him I subdued all powers and I have come to enter here, seeing that He has given me confidence.”

12

Cherub

G: “You are indeed a thief, just as you have said, but you can’t steal into this region of ours: it is fenced in with the sword that guards it. Turn back, my man, you have lost your way.”

13

Thief

G: “I was indeed a thief, but I have changed: it was not to steal that I have come here. Look, I’ve got with me the key to Eden, to open it up and enter: I will not be prevented.”

14

Cherub

D: “Our region is awesome and cannot be trodden, for fire is its indomitable wall; the blade flashes out all around it. How is it you have made so bold as to come here?”

15

Thief

D: “Your region is indeed awesome, just as you have said, but only until our Lord mounted the cross, when He transfixed the sword of all suffering so that your blade no longer kills.”

16

Cherub

H: “Ever since the time that Adam left I haven’t ever seen anyone turn up here; your race has been banished from the Garden; you shall not enter it, so don’t argue any more.”

17

Thief

H: Ever since the time that Adam left your Lord has been angered at our race, but now He is reconciled and has opened up the gate. It is to no purpose that you are standing here.”

18

Cherub

W: “You should realize that it isn’t possible for an unclean man to enter in here— and you are a murderer, and a shedder of blood. Who is it who has brought you to this pure place?”

19

Thief

W: You should realize that such is the wish of Him who makes the unclean clean, who was crucified together with me; with the blood from His side He has washed me completely clean. It was He who has sent me to Paradise.

20

Cherub

Z: “Be off with you, man, and don’t argue any further, for this is what I have been ordered: to guard from your race, by means of the sword, the Tree of Life that is to be found in here.”

21

Thief

Z: “Be off with you, angel; you should learn and see that I’ve left behind, hanging on Golgotha, that very Fruit of Salvation that’s in your garden— so that our race may now enter without any hindrance.”

22

Cherub

H: “Eve and Adam fell into debt and wrote out a document that will not be erased: they went out of here under sentence to live in low estate in the land of thorns.”

23

Thief

H: “The debt is repaid. Just listen, O Cherub: the document has now been transfixed on the cross; by means of both blood and water your Lord has wiped it out, and pinned it there with nails so that it won’t be exacted.”

24

Cherub

T: “Adam was driven out from this Garden and there is no way he can enter here again, for the sword’s blade is revolving and he’ll encounter it should he come near.”

25

Thief

T: “He who was driven out has returned to his father’s house, for the great Shepherd has gone out and found that sheep that had left the Garden; carrying him on His shoulders, He has escorted him back.”

26

Cherub

Y: “It is something totally novel that I’ve seen today: a path leading back into the Garden. But here are Adam’s footprints, take a look: he has left here and not returned again.”

27

Thief

Y: “Jesus your Lord has performed a novel deed, for now He has released Adam who had been confined; He has raised up whole crowds from inside Sheol, and they have sent me in advance, to open up for them.”

28

Cherub

K: “I am the cherub: how is it you have transgressed against my office of guarding, with which I’ve been entrusted? A fiery being like me cannot be vanquished, but as for you, an offspring of Adam, how bold you are!”

29

Thief

K: “I am your companion and we have but a single Lord in common for both of us; His authority is much higher than either yours or mine, and so I’ve no fear, seeing that it was He who has sent me.”

30

Cherub

L: “You simply cannot enter in here, for it is a resplendent place that no one can tread: the Shekhina is escorted around inside it, and the sword of fire is guarding it.”

31 Thief

L: “You cannot hold anyone back, for the sword is not blunted and made dull. The cross has opened up the Garden of Eden; there’s no means by which it can still be kept closed.”

32

Cherub

M: “Haven’t you heard from the Bible how the cherub and the sword go round guarding the way to the Garden of Eden, so that none of Adam’s offspring can enter here?”

33

Thief

M: “Haven’t you heard from the Revelation that your Lord has come down and become man, thus reconciling Adam, who was in a state of anger, bringing back to Eden the one who had been driven out?”

34

Cherub

N: “The sign of the revolving sword that guards the Tree of Life frightened off Adam when he was driven out, so how is it that you’re not afraid?”

35

Thief

N: “The sign of your Lord is with me, and by it the sharp sword is blunted; but it too is the sentence remitted, and by it, Adam, once expelled, shall return.”

36

Cherub

S: “The ranks of fire are standing here, thousands of them in bands innumerable; the multitudes are awesome, and quite simply you can’t travel on any further and enter among them.”

37

Thief

S: “The multitudinous ranks of which you’ve told me are themselves in awe as they look upon the Cross: the sign of the Son inspires them with awe and they worship before it, while me they hold in me they hold in honor.”

38

Cherub

E: “The sign of my Lord is upon the Chariot, resplendent upon the Throne, but from us it is hidden, so how is that you as you are claiming carry this sign of His and escort it?”

39

Thief

E: “His sign is upon the Chariot above, but look, His Cross is on Golgotha below, and with His own blood He has written a new missive permitting Adam to come back into the Garden.”

40

Cherub

P: “O agent in blood, who has brought you here? Who is it has sent you, a murderer? The sword is drawn, and if you make bold the blade will flash out against you.”

41

Thief

P: “O agent for the King, don’t be upset; your authority is repealed, for your Lord has willed it so. It is His cross that I’ve brought to you as a sign: look and see if it’s genuine, and don’t be so angry.”

42 Cherub

Š: “This Cross of the Son which you’ve brought to me is something I dare not look upon at all. It is both genuine and awesome; no longer will you be debarred from entering Eden, seeing that He has so willed it.”

43

Thief

Š: “The Cross of your Lord has breached the fence that had been built up between us and you, Anger has passed away and peace has come, and the path to Eden is no longer cut off.”

44

Cherub

Q: “He who was slain has sent to me and testified with His own blood that I should let go of the blame which I’ve been wielding. Fearful is this sign which you have brought me; enter in, O heir; I will not turn you back.”

45

Thief

Q: “Resurrection has occurred for the race of humankind that had been thrust out of their home. You cherubim and angels, rejoice with us, [cp Luke 15:10] for we have returned now to your city.”

46

Cherub

R: “Great is the compassion that has been shown to you, the descendants of Adam who sinned and thus died. Enter, thief, you will not be kept back, for the gate is now open for those who repent.”

47

Thief

R: “Great and most glorious is the compassion of my Lord, for His mercy has effected and His love has constrained Him. Rejoice with us, O spiritual beings, for we have been mingled into your race.”

48

Cherub

Š: “The Gentle One has held back from your race the blade and the sword that I have been wielding. Outcasts who have returned, have no fear, enter inside the Garden with exultation.”

49

Thief

Š: “Praise be in Eden that is now at peace, peace on earth which has been liberated. Blessed is the Crucified One who has reconciled us so that we shall not longer be deprived of your race.”

50

T: Thanks be to You, O Lord of all, who have brought back Adam who had been driven out, while to the thief who asked for mercy You opened up the gate that had been closed.

51

T: Thanks be to You, at whose word the thief entered into the Garden of Eden, and there was good hope for Adam again and he returned to the place from which he had gone out.

The Feast of the Holy Resurrection (`Eda D-Qyamta)
`Onitha: Shabakh L-Marya
Praise God in His Sanctuary... Hallelujah

This `onitha is chanted in Easter vigil after the prayer. It is a short hallelujah chant that is used in many other feasts. It is chanted with the verses of the Psalm 150. Each psalm clause has a different syllabic meter 6-9. Therefore, the first part of the `onitha is performed in a recitative style followed by the hallelujah melody, which has 4+4+5. The Hudra indicates that the hallelujah chant is to be repeated after each psalm clause.³³

The qāla of this `onitha is in the Maqam of Segah - Awshar. The melody is moving in step-wise motion.

The Ascension of Christ (Eda D-Sulaqa D-Maran)
`Onitha: L-Khorsia D-khila
 Your Throne is Majestic

This `onitha is assigned in the Ḥudra for the Ascension of Christ Feast. The `onitha is titled. D-qankē ܕܩܢܩܝܬܐ literally means for the “Most Holy Place”.³⁴ This area inside the church resembles the Most Holy Place in the Old Testament. This `onitha, is chanted in the beginning of the Rāzā qadišā. The priest (kahnā ܟܗܢܐ) beginning with two short clauses called (giyorē ܓܝܘܪܐ) they are illustrated in red in the Ḥudra.³⁵

These giyorē are related to the `onitha. The choir begins chanting the `onitha right after the priest finishes chanting the giyorē. At the end of the `onitha, there is a repeat word (tni ܬܢܝ) to repeat the whole `onitha one more time. The text of this `onitha is about glorifying God, the Cherubim wings and their face coverage before God. It recalls verses from the Old Testament about the Cherubim, especially from the books of Exodus, Kings, Chronicles, and Ezekiel.

The qāla of the `onitha is, taw nitḏam-mar (lit. Come let us wonder). This `onitha does not follow a regular syllabic meter. It is a through composed hymn. This qāla is chanted in the Maqam of Nahawand, which is similar to the natural minor key.

³⁴ Ḥudra II, p.691 (675 ܫܘܠܩܐ)

³⁵ Giyorā (sing.) ܓܝܘܪܐ, farcing, a verse intercalated in a psalm (lit. Alien) written in Red. These giyorē can be chanted by a priest, deacon, or even the choir leader usually a male, but could also be chanted by a choir female member.

Your throne is majestic and mighty. Cherubim surround the terrible throne of your majesty. O Lord, and with fear and trembling they cover their faces with their wings. for they are unable to lift up their eyes and look at the fire which is your Godhead. The Feast of Pentecost (`Eda D-Panṭequsṭeh)
Soghitha: B-`Eda Pṣikha
At the Joyful Festival

This soghitha is found in the book of Turgāmē on page 193 for the Feast of the Pentecost by Mar Narsai. The soghitha has sixteen verses, each verse is a couplet. Although this hymn is titled as soghitha, but in fact, I found this hymn to be two segments from Mar Narsai’s homily No. 27 on Pentecost. ܕܢܝܘܢ ܕܦܢܬܘܫܬܐ ܕܥܘܠܡܐ ܕܡܫܝܚܐ The exact translation is “on the day of the Feast of Pentecost.” Although, it has not been mentioned anywhere in the book of Turgāmē where the original text came from, I found reading through some of Mar Narsai’s mēmṛē that this soghitha is comprised of two combined segments of a long mēmṛā (424) lines.³⁶ The first ten verses (20 lines) of the soghitha are taken from line Lines (95-114) in the mēmṛā and verses (11-16) are taken from lines (143-154) of the same mēmṛā.³⁷

Although the `unāyā is not included in the book of Turgāmē, I find it essential to include the `Unāyā refrain as well as the first (14) lines of the beginning of the mēmṛā. I am thankful to Professor Sebastian Brock for providing the English translation of this soghitha for the purpose of this research.

The stanzas have two isosyllabic lines with a regular meter of 12+12.

The qāla is a very known one called Awā d-quṣṭā. This qāla is known in oriental Maqam as Maqam Hijaz.

The Feast of Pentecost (ʿEda D-Paṇtequṣṭeh)

B-ʿEda Pṣikha

ܦܢܬܘܨܬܐ ܕܩܘܕܫܐ ܕܩܘܕܫܐ

ܘܗܘ ܕܩܘܕܫܐ ܕܩܘܕܫܐ ܕܩܘܕܫܐ

At the Joyful Festival

The ʿUnāyā and lines (1- 14) added below are in the original copy of the memrā, which are not included in the soghitha in the book of Torgamē, p.193. The lines included in the Torgamē are taken from lines (95-114) and (143-154).

1. O Creator, open up the Treasury of the Spirit before mortals and enrich them with the treasures of vast resource (lit. power).
2. He who enriches all has placed His riches in an earthen vessel, and though it is despicable, it holds within itself a treasury of glorious things.
3. He has made weak clay the treasurer of His hidden matters, kindling it [=human body out of clay] with the Spirit, and placing in it, (albeit) despicable, the glorious Spirit.
4. He sang of His hidden matters on the strings of His body, like harps, He [=Christ] gave joy with His voice to both earthly and heavenly beings. Like a trumpet,
5. He cried out the commandment on a tongue of flesh, and there gathered to Him both the spiritual and the bodily.
6. The ‘broken read’ [=human body] became the flute for the Living Spirit and it gave delight to all with pleasant songs.
7. There resided in the one [= the body] who gives birth to sufferings the Power that gives life to all, and He began to cause Life to flow to all with the spirit of His lips.

The Hymn in Turgāmē begins with these verses:

Tune (Qāla): in the tune of (Awa Dqushta)

Refrain (Unāyā):

Come O mortals! Let us pay our debt to let Him multiply our human race with the power of His wisdom.

Verses (Bātē):

1. At the joyful festival He sacrificed Himself in the rite of the lamb, and at the feast of Pentecost His victory is marked out.
2. He gave freedom to all with the symbol of the salvation from Egypt, and He divided up His riches in accordance with the parables on Mount Sinai.
3. At the feast when He wrote out the tablets of stone for the hearts of stone,
He depicted spiritual signs within the stirrings of the soul.
4. On the day that He gave the heritage of sacrifices to fleshly beings,
He divided up spiritual wealth for spiritual beings.
5. At the time He wrote the Testament full of death,
He sealed the promises for the Testament that gives life.
6. In the likeness of the sounds of horns on Mount Sinai
He caused to be heard all of a sudden the sound of the Spirit who renews all.
7. There the sound was full of dread, causing terror to the servants, whereas here it is a sound that provides hope for the soul and the body.
8. There, fire, smoke and a mighty earthquake, but her light divided up into the sign if fire.
9. There servants ministered to servants amid fearsome sounds, here He calls out with a gentle voice, full of peace.

10. There, the adornment was of earthly things for earthly beings, but here it is the beauty of spiritual things for heavenly beings.
11. All of a sudden there was a mighty sound like that of wind, it filled the human abode with amazement at its resplendence.
12. They beheld tongues divided up like fire and He was placing for them a hidden indication over their heads.
13. With the sign of fire He gave spiritual wealth such that is not diminished when take it in quantity.
14. With a flash of light the Sovereign divided up for His forces spiritual provisions which do not get corrupted.
15. Through tongues resembling fire He revealed his wise intentions;
He taught them a new language that they did not know.
16. He depicted visually the power by which they would succeed:
with the likeness of fire they would get rid of the tangled growth of mortality.

The Feast of the Transfiguration (`Eda D-Gilyaneh)
Praise Hymn, *Tiṣbuḥta: Tawdi L-Ṭāwā

Tawdi l- ṭāwā by Mar Narsai, is one of the tiṣbkhatha ܛܝܫܒܚܬܐ that is widely mentioned in the Ḥudra to be chanted in different feasts. This tiṣbokhta is listed as one of the chants and hymns of the Feast of the Transfiguration `Eda D'Gilyāneh.³⁸ The main spiritual theme in this praise hymn is God's plan of salvation of the human race through the coming of Christ. Tawdi l- ṭāwā is assigned in the Ḥudra for (Lelia, Sundays, and Feasts). This tiṣbokhta is one of the tiṣbkhatha that were borrowed by the Maronite rite. However, Tawdi l- ṭāwā is titled as soghitha in the Maronite Sheḥimto and is assigned for (Lelia and Sundays).³⁹ This tiṣbokhta is one of the longest tiṣbkhatha, it has sixteen stanzas all in two isosyllabic lines of 8 (4+4) + 8 (4+4). Some churches use different qālē for different feasts. The qāla is in Maqam of Bayati. The melody of this qāla has to two repeated melodic phrases of (AA`).

Thanks be to the Good One who has liberated our race from the slavery of the Evil One and of Death.

He Has made peace for us with the assemblies on high Who were in a state of anger because of our iniquity.

Blessed is the Compassionate One Who, without our asking Him, came out in search for us and rejoiced in our salvation.

He depicted likenesses of our lost state and our return in the sheep that went astray;

‘heir’ and ‘son’ has he called our (human) nature which had gone astray and returned, died and was revived.

He gave joy to the assemblies of spirits at our repentance and revival.

Ineffable is the great love which the Lover of our race has shown to us;

for from our race He has made a mediator and reconciled the world with His majestic state.

Far greater and beyond us and beyond all creation is the new act which He has performed for our human nature.

10

for He made our body a holy temple so as to fill within it the worship of all.

11

Come, O (inhabitants) of both earth and heaven, marvel and wonder at the exalted rank.

12

seeing how our race has reached the great heights of divinity that cannot be attained.

13

Let heaven and earth, and all that is in them, give thanks with us to Him who magnifies our race, for He has renewed our image and wiped out our iniquity, called us by His name and made subject to us everything.

14

15

Worthy of praise from every mouth is He Who has exalted us above everything.

The Feast of the Holy Cross (`Eda D-Şliwa)
Madrāšā: Brikhu D-Waşliweh

For each Sunday of the Holy Cross church season, there is a specific madrāšā assigned for that day. There are also two other madrāšē assigned for the Holly Cross Feast Day. This madrāšā is assigned in the third volume of book of Ḥudra for the first Sunday of the Holly Cross season.⁴⁰ The text of the madrāšā has clear relations with the scripture verses in what the Apostle Paul wrote to the Corinthians about first Adam and Adam the last. “The first man, Adam, became a living soul, the last Adam became a life-giving spirit.”⁴¹ And to the Colossians, “Having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us, which was hostile to us; and He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross.”⁴² The unāyā has one couplet (two isosyllabic lines) of 5+5. Stanzas Bātē have three couplets, each is comprised of 5+5. The tune is Rēsh Qāla, which means the hymn tune رهب يدجيد have the original qāla. This qāla is also widely used to chant other madrāšē. The qāla is in Maqam of Saba.

Feast of the Sanctification of the Church (Quddash `Edta)
`Onitha, Ni`ol B-Thawditha L-Heklakh
We Enter with Solemnity

This `onitha is chanted during the Sanctification of the Church season. It is guided in the Ḥudra to chant this `onitha to the tune of Mara D-khul-la دڭدڭ دڭدڭ (lit. Lord of all).⁴³ It is called `onitha d-ramšā, دڭدڭ دڭدڭ because it is chanted during the early evening (twilight) prayer. Although, this `onitha doesn't show four separated verses, but it is actually divided into four verses with a regular syllabic meter. Each verse has a group of 4 isosyllabic rhyming feet of 7+7+7+7. The `onitha is performed by two choirs دڭدڭ دڭدڭ gudā qadmāyā, the front choir and دڭدڭ دڭدڭ gudā takhtāyā, the lower or back choir. kahnā the priest, deacon, or the choir leader will chant the first assigned phrase دڭدڭ of the psalm that is illustrated in red in the Ḥudra. Then the first choir will sing the first verse.

The second choir will sing the second verse. After the second verse, there is a repeat word (tni دڭدڭ) to repeat the `onitha from the beginning. In the second time, the kahnā or the other choir leader will chant the second phrase pithgāmā دڭدڭ of the psalm. The two choirs will alternate in chanting the other two verses. The word (Šab-bāh) lit. Glorify printed after the repeat means to chant the Trinity prayer before beginning the third verse. The choir will chant “Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit” Then the choir will chant the rest of the `onitha (verses 3 and 4). The qāla of the `onitha is in Maqam Ajam, this Maqam is similar to the major scale in western notation.

Antiphons of the Martyrs (‘Onyatha D-Sahde)
‘Onitha: Sahde Qadishe
The Holy Martyrs

This ‘onitha is within the hymns ‘Onyātha D-sahde ܘܢܝܬܐ ܕܫܗܕܝܐ. These ‘onyātha are provided at the end of each volume of the printed Ḥudra.⁴⁴ ‘Onyatha D-sahde are known and also mentioned in Ḥudra are composed by the 4th century bishop Saint or Mar Marutha of Maypherqat in Mesopotamia.⁴⁵ He composed these ‘onyātha after witnessing the persecution of the Christian martyrs, who were killed by the Persian King Shapur II and Yazdegerd I. Antiphons of the Martyrs ‘Onyātha D-sahde as explained earlier in chapter four became part of the daily liturgical prayers in the Church of the East. They are recited during vespers and matins. However, these ‘onyatha are not recited on Sundays or feast’s days of as in the liturgical calendar. The ‘onyāth are alternated by two choirs.⁴⁶

I provided only two verses, which are in fact two ‘onyatha. This antiphon or ‘onitha (two verses) is followed by more than 16 ‘onyatha, which could be considered (sixteen verses) as well, since all these short ‘onyātha are chanted to the same tune of the first ‘onitha, (first verse). Also, all are connected in the text on the same page. In addition, they all share the same syllabic pattern. All these ‘onyātha are separated by a solo short phrase pithgāmā ܫܘܒܝܢܐ chanted by either the kahnā clergy or a choir leader. Then, both choirs alternate in chanting after each solo phrase.

Hymns for Sundays and Feast Days (Khaḍbshabeh W-d-`Ede)
Tišbuḥta: Mārān Īṣu`

Mārān Īṣu` مَرَّانِ إِسْحٰى Our Lord Jesus is one of the most chanted praise hymns Tišbuḥta in the Church of the East. This tišbuḥta is attributed to Mar Aprem- Ephrem in the printed liturgical books such as the Ḥudra as well as in old manuscripts.⁴⁷ The tišbuḥta is widely chanted in the church liturgy. This chant is assigned in the in Ḥudra for all Sundays and Feasts (مَرَّانِ إِسْحٰى مَرَّانِ إِسْحٰى). This tišbuḥta is also assigned for other occasions such as the Bā`uthā Dabthulāthā (مَرَّانِ إِسْحٰى مَرَّانِ إِسْحٰى).⁴⁸ Mārān Īṣu` can be also found in the book of Turgāma.⁴⁹ The Tišbḥāthā consists of ten verses, which starts with Jesus's salvation, followed by verses that affirm the divinity of Jesus. As many other Tišbḥāthā, it includes a doctrinal teaching within the praise theme. Mārān Īṣu`, has ten isosyllabic couplets, each couplet consists of 8+8. The tune or qāla of Mārān Īṣu` is not mentioned, but it has its own qāla that sometimes is used to chant another hymn too. The melody of this Tišbuḥta is chanted in Maqam Hijaz.

Hymns for Sundays and Feast Days

Tishbukhta: Maran Ishu

ܕܡܪܝܢܝܫܘܘܬܝܢ ܕܡܪܝܢܝܫܘܘܬܝܢ
ܕܡܪܝܢܝܫܘܘܬܝܢ ܕܡܪܝܢܝܫܘܘܬܝܢ

Our Lord Jesus

Our Lord Jesus, King that is worshipped, who conquered by His Passion death the tyrant.

O Son of God who has promised to us New Life in the Kingdom on high.

Cause to cease from us all kinds of harm, and cause to reside in our country peace and compassion.

So that on the day of Your Epiphany we may come to life in Your presence, and may we go out to meet You in accordance with Your will.

With Hosannas may we laud Your name for Your graciousness towards our race,

For Your mercies have multiplied towards our human condition, and Your love has shone out over our dead state.

You have wiped out our debts through Your act of forgiveness: praise to Your name for Your gift!

8

Blessed is Your honour from within Your (holy) place, the One who forgives sins out of his mercy.

And in Your grace hold us all worthy to give thanks to and worship Your divinity.

10 and to Your Lordship at all times may we raise up praise, Amen and Amen.

Hymns for Everyday (Soghyāthā D-Khashkhan L-Khulyom)
Teshbokhta: Nwiye W-Malke
Prophets and kings

This hymn is titled as soghitha in the book of Turgāmē, it is within the last eight soghyāthā D-khashkhan L-khulyom, these soghyāthā are assigned for everyday.⁵⁰ However, this hymn is also found in some manuscripts listed before and after two known Tišbḥāthā: (mārān Īṣu` مَارَانِ عِيسَى) and (ḥaye-yel mārān حَيَّة يَل مَارَان). The title of this tišbuḥta in some manuscripts says in red “another one for Raza” Mass. It is also mentioned in the manuscripts that it is composed by Mar Aprem the (malpana) teacher. Nwiye W-malke consists of eight isosyllabic couplets, each couplet consists of 8+8 syllables. This hymn also has its own qāla, the melody of the qāla is in Maqam Bayati.

Prophets and kings

1. Prophets and kings earnestly desired for this Raza [mystery] of the Body of our Lord.
2. Who with his love gave it for to the holy church: and [the church] will sanctify Him with fear and love.
3. Whome sanctifies his blood: He sanctifies is like gold that enters a furnace of fire.
4. [He] Purifies, shines and sanctifies him, and becomes a sacred garment [vessel].
5. His body pardons the trespasses: and his blood forgives the sins of humans.
6. Take my beloved, eat from it and the Holy Spirit will enter your body.
7. Believe my brothers and don't be in doubt: and whoever doesn't believe is deprived of mercies. [Will not receive God's mercy].
8. Glory to Him [Jesus] and to the Father who sent Him: and for the Holy Spirit for ever and ever.

Hymns of Holy Communion for Everyday
(Soghyāthā D'Qurbana D-Khashkhan L-Khulyom)
Soghitha: Bashweekhuthhon
Upon Their Glory

This hymn is listed in the book of Turgāmē as soghitha by Mar Narsai for ordinary days. However, I found out that this is another example of a soghitha that the text is taken from a homily memrā No.17 of Mar Narsai on the Mysteries `Al pušaq rāzē ܐܠ ܩܘܪܒܢܐ ܕܟܚܝܫܟܗܢ ܕܟܘܠܝܘܡ. This memrā is one of the longest memrē by Mar Narsai (938) lines.⁵¹ The segment that is included as a soghitha is in fact taken from line (5-30) of the memrā. The memrā consist of thirteen isosyllabic couplets, each couplet consists of 12+12 syllables. This is another example of a memrā text that is included in the church hymnal book as an independent soghitha. Mar Narsai wrote his homilies in verse in isosyllabic couplets. Furthermore, Mar Narsai used his imaginative writing style to explain essential spiritual doctrine of faith, which make his meme verses easy to be used as independent soghyāthā. In fact, I found this a very smart way to read and learn Mar Narsai's thousands of beautifully structured memrē verses that are unfortunately still hid in manuscripts. The qāla is a very known and widely used tune called Awā d-quštā. The melody of this qāla is in Maqam of Hijaz.

ܘܗܘܐ ܕܡܫܝܚܐ ܕܩܕܝܫܐ ܕܡܫܝܚܐ ܕܩܕܝܫܐ ܕܡܫܝܚܐ

Upon Their Glory

1. Upon their glory my mind gazed narrowly; but dread seized upon me and caused me to desist (and) left me without performance.

Without performance I stood still, for I was disturbed; and I began to cry out passionately with the son of Amos.

With the son of Amos I gave woe to myself, as one defiled who in his defilement had fixed the gaze of his mind on the Mysteries of his Lord.

On these things I pondered, and with fear I turned back; and the Spirit by Its beckoning encouraged me to enter the holy of holies.

Into the holy of holies of the glorious Mysteries It permitted me to enter, that I might reveal the beauty of their glory to the sons of the Mystery.

Come, then, O son of the divine Mystery, hear the record-marvelous to tell- of the Mysteries of the Church.

I have a mystery (or secret), I have a mystery, I have a mystery! (I) and mine, the prophet cries: with understanding, then, hear the mystery that is expounded to thee.

Lofty, in truth, and exalted is this mystery that the priest performs in the midst of the sanctuary mystically.

Mystically the Church depicts the glorious Mysteries; and as by an image she shews to all men those things that have come to pass.

10

Those things which came to pass in the death of the Son she commemorates by the Mysteries; His resurrection also from the dead she reveals before all.

11

A mystery mystically shews that which has come to pass and that which is to come about: but the Church shews mystically in her Mysteries only that which has come to pass.

12

The Church performs her Mysteries in secret away from those that are without; and the priest celebrates privately within the sanctuary.

13. Only her children and her sons, the baptized and the signed, does she allow to enjoy communion in these adorable Mysteries which she performs.

CHAPTER 6: CONCLUSION

This study aimed to introduce Assyrian or Syriac chants and hymns of the Church of the East of an early era of Christianity in Mesopotamia. An ancient and rich repertoire that needs to be examined in several areas. This study examined fourth to seventh century chants and hymns of a fascinating era that is considered the Golden Age of Syriac literature. Five main genres of the chants and hymns (soghyāthā, madrāshe, Tešbḥatha, `onyatha, and memrē) were studied in terms of textual and musical analysis. Most of the selected hymns were by four main composers; Mar Aprem 4th cent., Mar Marutha 4th cent., Mar Narsai 5th cent., and Mar Babai the Great 6th cent. Among the selected hymns are two long hymns soghyāthā that falls under the dispute poems hymns, an example of a continuous ancient poetic genre practiced by Mesopotamian poets 4000 years ago.

Twenty chants and hymns of different Feasts and ecclesiastical themes from the Church of the East liturgical books were selected. The hymns provided covered the main Church Feasts and events, such as the Nativity of Christ, Epiphany, the Holy Resurrection, Ascension, Pentecost, Transfiguration and others. The hymns also cover other important Fests of the Church, such as the Rogation of the Ninevites.

I also presented some of the unique chant practices that are absent in other church traditions, such as singing the Antiphons of the Martyrs, a practice that began from the early time of the church. I also explained some of the tragic events that faced the Christians in Beth Nahrain including religious persecution, massacres, and genocides. These attacks occurred from the early ages of Christianity such as the time of Shapur II in the 4th century and continued throughout the ages until the modern era of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. I discussed how significantly these events affected the Assyrians and still impact their churches, language, or culture, and how they threatened their survival and historical presence in Iraq. The continuation of these attacks and violations on the Assyrian Lands and villages by several groups in Iraq lead to displace and deport most of the indigenous inhabitants of Iraq.

The melody system of the chants in Church of the East tradition follows the fixed melody system of tunes named qale. These qale function as a guidance melody for many chants of the same number of the syllabic meters. After analyzing the twenty examples of the chants and hymns selected in this study, I found the melodies of the qale were in seven different oriental Maqams. These Maqams are known in the Middle East as: Bayati, Nahawand, Ajam, Kurd-Lami, Hijaz, Segah-Awshar, and Saba.

The chants and hymns consisted of different Syllabic meters. The hymns that included isosyllabic lines and regular meters had repeated melodic lines in their qale, which have easier melodies. On the other hand, irregular meters and complex syllabic meter were found to have unrepeated and more complex melodies and more difficult to sing as well. All the chants and hymns selected in this research are provided in the Syriac text with English translation and performed in audio files by an Assyrian church choir teacher. The melodies of the qale have a close interval relationship. Pitches mostly move by half tone, three-quarters tone, and a whole tone. Skips also found but leaps rarely occurred within the melodies of the qale.

The presence of women's choirs in the Church of the East could be traced back to the fourth century when Saint Ephrem emphasized the necessity of the participation of women in church singing. He believed that women have the right to sing and praise the Lord, for they were created equal to men. Interestingly, some of the fourth and fifth centuries Christian theologians and leaders of the church were struggling to convince the communities around them with the notion of gender equality, especially when it came to the participation of women in the church

Transliteration Sheet Guide

In order to provide the closest way to the Syriac pronunciation words provided in the definitions of terms, I provided a transliteration of the Syriac words in the middle column of the list. I used the most standard Romanization of the sounds values systems for the Syriac language used by most of the North American libraries and the British Library. The sounds values are listed in the table below:
