WHERE TO FIND FINGERLINGS AND FISH FARMING SUPPLIES

Marley Beem, Area Aquaculture Specialist
Southeast District Extension Office

Finding a source of quality fish for stocking is essential for the commercial fish farmer as well as the recreational fishing pond owner. A map of fingerling suppliers is shown on page 2, to help you locate suppliers in your area. In addition, this publication lists sources of supplies and equipment as well as fish processors. Inclusion in this list does not imply endorsement, nor does exclusion imply lack of endorsement.

TIPS ON BUYING QUALITY CATFISH FINGERLINGS

Six to eight inch long fingerlings are needed if 1 to 1 1/4 lb. fish are to be grown in one season.

Avoid fish that are skinny (see table above) or show disease signs, such as pale gills, white spots, redness around mouth, bulging eyes, or sores.

Check to be sure that no undesirable fish are mixed with your order. Green sunfish (goggleeye perch), bullheads (mudcats), and goldfish are among the species that should not be stocked in most ponds.

Discuss the fingerling suppliers guarantee before placing an order. Most suppliers will replace fingerlings or make a refund if fish die within a certain period.
