Our Scrap Drive

We gathered 3 truck loads of scrap in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  days. We went  $1\frac{1}{2}$  mi. north and got  $1\frac{1}{2}$  truck loads and 1 mile and a half west and got 2 truck loads. we gathered iron from nails up to cook stoves. We collected a little over \$19.00 worth of scrap to lick the Japs and Germans.

Our Scrap Drive

During our scrap drive we found some scrap which was not hard to get although we found some which was partly covered up and had to be dug out. Some of us had blisters on our hands and others had shins and bruises. I'm sure we were all glad to loose a little skin if it will help to win the war. And also the money was badly needed at our school for several small items

I have five uncles in the army. Their names are Bob Mahon, Lee Mahon, John Mahon, Bill Mahon, and Douglas Mease. The first four are infantrymen and the last is a cook. I also have two cousins in the army. One just joined the forces and he is 18. The other is a motorcycle patrol he is 29. ## The Lorelei

By CHARLES A. WELLS

THE old legend of the singing siren, luring seamen and ships to their doom, has become a timeless picture. The song of greed sounds sweet and inviting to the distant ear, but its voice comes from a wreck-strewn shoal where the most promising achievements have been left to the destructive grind of time and tide. Right now there are a dozen nations paying a bitter price for the pursuit of selfish materialism, and all the high phrases of statesmanship do not disguise what is going on under the battering billows of today's wide conflict. This is also true of countless individuals who now are using the war for personal gain. But when this disordered day is past, we will find that we have paid dearly for our course. There are many men hugging their quickly fattened bank-rolls in anticipation of days that will never come. Selfish materialism is rapidly bringing society to revolutionary changes that will wreck many things afloat today. When men or nations shut their ears to the song of duty and justice and follow the song of greed, inevitable shipwreck lies ahead.

Bonds.

The school and the families of the children have $57.40 in bonds and stamps.
