Hi Linda,

Nancy forwarded me the PDFs of your two lectures. May we have permission not only to post them on our website, but also to upload them to the Institute's digital archive? The ISHF archive is part of OU's online repository. As I understand APA copyright policies, this would be allowable. But we need your explicit permission to post it in our archive.

Here are the copyright policies from the APA website:

The APA requires that authors of lectures and addresses, including presidential addresses, Dewey lectures, Romanell lectures, and any other prize lectures that are published in the Proceedings and Addresses of the APA, assign copyright to the APA in order for the material to be published by the APA. Authors exempt from this request are direct employees of the U.S. government, whereby papers are not subject to copyright protection in the United States, or non-U.S. government employees, whose governments hold the copyright to the paper. Authors may submit a copyright transfer form here.

Authors retain the following rights to re-use their material after it is accepted for publication by the APA. These rights apply without needing to seek permission from the APA.

- Authors may make multiple copies of their material without charge, including for use in coursepacks.
- Authors may post an electronic version of their material on their personal website and/or their employer's online repository.
- Authors may reprint their material in collections of their own work.

Note that items posted in the Institute archive appear in searches made from within the OU Library website. This would give your papers more visibility for OU faculty and students.

Hi, Linda,

I received a copy of the Proceedings and Addresses of the APA today and wonder if you have pdf files of your Presidential Address and Dewey Lecture that we could post on the ISHF website?

Also, I'll ask Max to make copies of the first pages of these publications and post them on our bulletin board.

Thanks,

Nancy
